Letting the Court Die
The World's Copper
Sewed in a Bear Skin
Earth's Strange Motions

By Arthur Brisbane

ACCORDING TO Mussolini, the world is preparing feverishly for war. Therefore, he cannot allow Italy to disarm, although he would like to save the money and turn his thoughts and efforts to peace.

Every other ruler in Europe will say the same, excepting some Balkan little countries. They say, "Fighting is the only occupation worthy of a gentleman."

This country, if it would attend to its own business, keep its defenses in order and keep them MODERN, could save half what it spends on preparation now, and be well prepared.

Meanwhile it is a pleasure to hear that the World Court has been postponed for another year. Perhaps that is "letting the old cat die out."

Our government, afraid of big business, might learn something from the British. They showed us recently what could be done with rubber, making Americans pay outrageously high prices, enough to meet the British debt instalments.

And now two great copper companies in Rhodesia combine, making one company of the B'Wana M'Kubwa and the N'Changa mines.

Sir Auckland Geddes tells of the great advantages to be had from a well-planned trust, and was sorry that all companies could not have been put into it.

The British hope to get up a company that will dominate the world. Long ago this column called attention to the effect that copper production in Africa might have on values here.

If the United States would let American copper men, Ryan, Jackling and others that understand the industry, combine to protect the United States' interests regardless of an antiquated Sherman law, the British would not dominate the copper world so easily.

Another more cheerful day in Wall Street. Perhaps the bottom of the financial world is not going to fall out after all. The better feeling comes a little late for many, unfortunately. They must comfort themselves with the old German saying:

"Wer Geld hat kann spekulieren. Wer keins hat kann nichts verlieren." "Who has money can speculate. Who has none can lose nothing."

Everything is comparative, even sorrow. The head of a great bank in New York tells of a client "with the saddest face I have ever seen in my life."

One year ago this client was worth at least sixty millions of dollars. And today his fortune is reduced to not more than twenty million dollars. "And you can't imagine," said the banker, "how that man suffers."

Ivan the Terrible, Czar of Russia, to subdue those that opposed him, invented queer punishments.

On one occasion he had a bishop sewed up in a bear skin, and the bishop, in his bear skin, thrown to a pack of half starved dogs.

His total sufferings amounted to far less than the sufferings of some that have seen their fortunes and the results of their life work gradually taken from them, bit by bit during the past year.

Harvard sends reassuring news about this grand old earth, on which men have lived, according to Prof. Osborne, for forty million years, and on which geologists, physicists, astronomers tell us we shall continue to live for at least a million million years more.

Our strange rolling domicile is one with many motions. We all know that it turns around on its axis, rolls around the sun in 365 days, and is traveling through space, accompanying the sun on its journey. But most of us forget about the many other motions of the earth.

We are glad to learn from Harvard that a "recent mysterious shaking of the earth's crust was a movement back and forth, rhythmical and regular, six seconds to each swing."

And while the earth's crust does move, it moves only two ten-thousands of an inch in either direction, the motion continuing for many days.

We should be very grateful that little human microbes can be safe on this whirling globe, twenty-five thousand miles around, as heavy as though it were made of solid steel, with hot fire under our feet, and absolute zero, more than 400 degrees below freezing all around us.

A United States judge, in New Jersey, as you know, announced from the bench that the prohibition law is not legal.

JUDGE CHARGES GIRL FRAMEUP

Following a personal investigation, Judge James H. Sisk in Superior court at East Cambridge today, released George Tarkanian, Lowell shoemaker, charged with attacking a 15-year-old girl, and branded the whole case a "frame-up."

It was the first time in years, according to attaches of the court, that a judge had revealed making a personal inquiry at the scene of an alleged crime to get at the truth.

The case was tried without a jury. The girl, Genevieve Cuczeck, and Police Sergt. Clark of Lowell had testified against Tarkanian.

"I am entirely satisfied that the case is a frame-up against the defendant," said Judge Sisk. "I went to Lowell last night and investigated the witnesses and inspected the shop. I find the defendant not guilty."

Asst. Dist. Atty. Frank G. Volpe, who conducted the prosecution, retorted:

"If you think it's a frame-up, why not prosecute the girl?"

Judge Sisk agreed that should be done, but when asked about it later, Volpe would not say whether he would prefer charges against her. Attorney Edward J. Tierney, counsel for the shoemaker, sharply criticized her testimony and that of the police sergeant, in court yesterday.

Cong. Blanton Raps Ruling of Clark

A romance of little more than two years ago withered and died today in Probate Court when a decree nisi was granted to Mrs. Emily Wentworth Fox from Hugh Corby Fox, Jr., of New York, who today left Washington to enter the diplomatic service at Buenos Aires.

Fox, a graduate of Harvard in 1928 and son of Countess Horace de Pourtales of Chateau Prangins, Switzerland, did not contest the divorce action of his Brookline society girl wife, who alleged cruel and abusive treatment.

In a memorandum filed with the court, Fox agreed to pay his wife $7000 alimony, payable at the rate of $583.33 a month and to pay also $250 a month for support of their daughter, born last July. Provision was also made for the baby's payments to continue in event of Fox's death.

The former Emily Lowe Wentworth, daughter of Mrs. Maud Simpson Wentworth of 12 Dean rd., Brookline, was married to Fox at Brookline on June 20, 1928.

After the wedding the couple went to Paris, where Fox studied to fit himself for the diplomatic service, and then they went to Washington, where he continued his studies.

Children in Pleas for Christmas Aid

Out of the depths of hardship and destitution rise the wailing voices of little children, pleading for food and a share of the Christmas spirit now pervading the land.

Through no fault of their own and from causes beyond their understanding, these little ones are forced to ask of the more fortunate the few articles which will make Christmas a real occasion for them.

Dazed by adversity, their faces pinched and wan from underfeeding, they hold up tiny hands in imploring appeals to the generous-hearted.

Scores of letters are being received daily by the Boston American Basket Fund editor from anguished parents who have pocketed their pride and asked for aid to still the voices of their children.

A Cambridge mother wrote:

"I wish I was sending a check for my contribution instead of an appeal to somebody else's contribution, but my husband has been out of work for a long time and I have six small children. They look forward to Christmas as though on that day we will be lifted out of all our misery, and that is why I am writing to you.

"I know I won't be able to make them happier on Christmas Day than on any other day unless I swallow my pride and ask for help. The picture of what

COL. LINDBERGH SAVES WIFE

Baltimore, Dec. 19 (AP)—Charles A. Lindbergh's plane caught fire at Logan Field today as he was about to leave for New York with Mrs. Lindbergh, but he extinguished the flames unaided.

Mrs. Lindbergh, the former Anne Morrow, was in the cockpit as oil or gasoline on an exhaust pipe caught fire, apparently from back fire. Lindbergh seized a hand fire extinguisher and put out the flames almost immediately.

Mrs. Lindbergh did not leave the cockpit,

Mr. and Mrs. Lindbergh were overnight guests at the home of Dr. William H. Wilmer, eye specialist at Johns Hopkins hospital.

The fire delayed the Lindberghs about two hours. At 2:40 p. m., after minor repairs, they took off for Newark.

Congress Speeds Up on Relief Measures

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—Senate and House alike concentrated today on adjusting their differences on the companion relief measures. Quick enactment was the goal.

The House voted acceptance of the House-Senate conference compromise on $45,000,000 for drouth loans. The Senate took up the drouth bill as soon as it reached there with the leadership intent on getting it to the White House.

Senators McNary (R.), Oregon, and Robinson, the Democratic leader who sponsored the $60,000,000 bill passed by the Senate, both asked acceptance of the compromise.

PROVISION FOR FOOD AID

Replying to Senator Caraway, Democrat, Arkansas, the Oregon senator said he thought there was "ample provision" in the bill to permit the secretary of agriculture to loan money to the farmers for the purchase of food in the event of "dire emergency," although the provision allowing loans for this purpose was stricken from the bill.

McNary was chairman of the conference which drafted the compromise between the Senate's $60,000,000 and the House $30,000,000 measures.

Senator Robinson expressed the opinion that more than $45,000,000 was necessary, but said that could be determined within the next few months, and if more were needed he would ask it.

Mayor Thompson Looks to Coolidge

Chicago, Dec. 19 (AP) Mayor William Hale Thompson today announced his candidacy for a fourth term as mayor of Chicago. He expressed the hope Calvin Coolidge would be the next Republican nominee for President.

"For he is the one that brings us a full dinner pail, a full treasury and great prosperity," he said.

He added the Republican party needed a strong candidate "like Coolidge" if it expected to win the next election.

CHELSEA MAN IS DROWNED IN AUTO AT REVERE

Firemen Recover the Body of Philip Lewitzky, but Accident Is Unexplained

Philip W. Lewitzky, 38, a Chelsea dealer in wool waste, was drowned today when his sedan left the Salem turnpike at the end of Snake bridge, in Revere, and plunged into a branch of the Saugus river.

His body was recovered less than an hour later when firemen succeeded in raising the car enough so they could cut through the top.

Identification was made by Jacob Resnick, his partner in business. Lewitzky was married and the father of two children. His home is at 21 County rd., Chelsea.

MOTORMAN CALLS AID.

An investigation to establish the cause of the tragedy was begun by police. According to eye-witnesses, Lewitzky's heavy car was traveling at a moderate rate of speed when it swerved from the road at the bridge-end and rolled down an embankment, crashed through two inches of ice and disappeared. The embankment is not steep.

Among eye-witnesses were R. E. Thorpe of Stone st., Franklin pk., Saugus, and John Murphy, Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway motorman. Murphy was operating his trolley car when he saw the plunge. He stopped his car and shouted to Charles McPherson, a passerby, to notify the police.

AUTO IS RAISED.

Police reserves and fire apparatus sped to the scene and Fire Chief Thomas J. Carrick directed rescue operations. Firemen worked from ladders laid over the ice and lowered from the bridge and finally succeeded in getting chains around the submerged car.

In the meantime, Lewitszky's hat was found floating. When his body was recovered it was believed that the car had contained another person, but subsequent investigation proved he had been alone.

FIVE NEW JUSTICES ON SUPREME BENCH GIVE DRY FOES HOPE

NEW ATTACK ON LAW IS LAUNCHED

Anti-Prohibitionists Throw Strength Into Fight to Uphold Judge's Decision

Washington, Dec. 19 (US)—A new all-around attack on the validity of the prohibition amendment, to exhaust the remaining possibilities of blasting it out of the Constitution by causing the Supreme Court to reverse itself, appeared in the making today.

NEW JUSTICES

Although anti-prohibitionists will throw their fighting strength into the effort to sustain Clark's decision before the Supreme Court, and push on their modification and repeal moves, there is keen interest in an all-around test if the Clark decision is upset.

The anti-drys see two factors that may help them in the high courts:

Five members, a majority, have taken their seats on the bench since the first and last major assaults were made on prohibition in 1920 and 1921.

Possibility of the court ultimately giving more weight to scientific and social considerations, as Clark did, than has been customary.

OLD CASE SIMILAR

The spear-head of the government's defense in all likelihood will be the case of Hawke vs. Smith, lawyers agreed. There the Supreme Court came so close to the precise questions raised by Clark and the lawyers who argued before him that most drys deny there is any difference.

The decision said that Congress, in deciding what method to pursue in submitting a constitutional amendment to the states, exercises a national power specifically granted by the constitution." It pointed out that other amendments had been adopted in this way.

Clark distinguished this case from his own, however. In the earlier case the court was dealing, directly at least, with an alternative of ratifying amendments by referendum vote. Clark insisted upon the alternative of ratification by state constitutional conventions.

CONSISTENTLY DRY

Whether Clark's distinction is substantial enough to influence the court to hold that Congress was wrong, and the amendment is therefore invalid, appears to be the crux of the case. The doubt about this, joined with ten years of consistent support of prohibition by the Supreme Court, leads a majority of lawyers to predict an upset of the Clark decision.

Dry Law Held Legal on Issues Before Clark

Chicago, Dec. 19 (US)—On identically the same issue as that on which Judge William T. Clark, at Newark, N. J., pronounced the prohibition amendment to the constitution invalid, Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley yesterday declared the amendment legally adopted and, with its supporting legislation, in full effect.

ARttorneys for George Morris moved before Judge Lindsey that an indictment be quashed on the same ground as that argued by counsel before Judge Clark, namely that the prohibition amendment was invalid, having been illegally adopted.

A postponement was asked in order that his attorneys might have time to get a copy of the Clark decision. To this request Judge Lindley responded:

"If you are basing your arguments on Judge Clark's decision, I am ready to give you a decision on that matter right now, so that we won't be further annoyed here with motions of that kind.

"If Judge Clark's ruling is right, there isn't a law enacted by Congress that isn't void. Slavery would be legal because the law prohibiting it was enacted by Congress on a matter previously under the jurisdiction of the different states."

Hughes' Daughter Weds New York Man

The ceremony was performed by Harry Emerson Fosdick, of New York, assisted by Dr. William S. Abernethy, of Washington. Among the gifts was a pair of large and exquisitely wrought silver urns, suitable for holding large bouquets in a decorative scheme—an expression of the good wishes of President and Mrs. Herbert Hoover.

nation of certain Senate amendments to the public works bill. They would make available $1,660,000 for road construction in Alabama and $506,067 in Georgia, as well as require that local labor be used on projects under the measure. Whether the Senate again would insist on the amendments remained to be seen.

Senate action on the Interior Department supply bill was blocked by Howell of Wyoming through filibuster. He held the floor more than 90 minutes, exhausting the time available for its consideration.

Preparations already were under way to make the money for drouth loans available by appropriations under the new act, which authorizes the money but does not appropriate it.

Chairman Wood told the House the appropriations committee was waiting to hear from Secretary Hyde how much money would be needed at once.

Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, blocked immediate consideration of the farm board fund. He made no explanation of his move and the measure went over until tomorrow.

BORAH BLOCKS SPEED.

Borah said he wanted "to know what the Farm Board intends to do with this appropriation and what it has done with the other $250,000,000, for so far as I can see, it has not benefited the farmer at all."

He did not say he would oppose the appropriation, which Chairman Legge asked as an emergency.

Senate amendments on the public works bill, to which the House disagreed, returning the measure once more to conference, included those of Black of Alabama and George of Georgia to make certain road funds available for immediate use in their states, and of Couzens of Michigan requiring local labor to be used on the projects to be built.

Special Forecasts for Each N. E. State

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—Folks down east are to be given separate weather forecasts for their states instead of being grouped as northern New England and southern New England.

C. F. Marvin, chief of the weather bureau, announced today the present practice would be discontinued January 1 and separate weather and temperature forecasts would be issued twice daily for each of the New England states.

Morgan, Harris Named in Big German Gold Plot

Duesseldorf, Ger., Dec. 19 (AP)—Big names of American finance glittered like nuggets in the stream of evidence which rippled through the opening session today of the trial of Heinz Kurschildgen, alleged gold transmutation swindler.

If what Kurschildgen's "influential connections" led him to believe can be accepted as fact, one American banker was willing to pay him a million marks for a secret process for changing base metals into gold.

Witnesses told the court they had been led to understand that J. P. Morgan and H. B. Harris of Harris & Forbes had shown interest in Kurschildgen's ideas.

A big American investment trust also was said to have sent a representative to Germany to see if Kurschildgen had some new valuable process. The representative returned, however, without buying any stock in the gold process.

BRIDE OF BOGUS BARONET GIVEN SANITY TEST

Mrs. Bramwell Taken, Struggling, From Boston to Worcester State Hospital

Barbara Buffum Bramwell, 27, of Oxford, who on Monday hoaxed her family and 200 wedding guests into believing she was marrying a titled Englishman, was taken into custody at a Back Bay hotel today and committed to Worcester State Hospital.

The four-day bride of the bogus British baronet was located at the hotel on an all-alone honeymoon, after it was established that her new husband is plain William Bramwell, a clerk on the S. S. Mauretania, which ship is now bearing him to England.

Her family asked that she be placed in the hospital for observation and she was taken back to Worcester fighting and kicking at her captors and screaming that she was being "railroaded."

ESCAPES CAPTORS

Once inside the hospital grounds she escaped from her captors and ran but was caught again after a short chase and virtually carried into the building.

The dramatic climax to the hoax and disclosure that she had been a patient at the hospital last spring gave rise to the possibility that her marriage to the ship's clerk may have no legal standing.

Sought since the title of her new husband was first questioned, the bride was located by her family at a Back Bay hotel at 2 o'clock this morning.

Her brother, Warren, with Deputy Sheriff Arthur A. Keefe of Worcester County motored to Boston with the commitment papers that authorized her incarceration at the Worcester State Hospital last spring.

SCREAMS PROTEST

At 5 o'clock they called at Station 16, Back Bay, and asked that a policeman be detailed with them. Sergt. Edward Twohig was assigned to accompany them to the hotel.

Shortly after 6 o'clock they aroused the bride, were admitted to her room and finally prevailed upon her to accompany them back to Worcester.

She was taken back by automobile in 50 minutes and before 8 o'clock, screaming her protests and accusations, was led into the hospital.

"My husband will take me out when he comes home," she informed her captors.

Dr. William A. Bryan, superintendent of the hospital, succeeded in quieting her and assured her that if her husband came and proved that he was legally married to her, she would be released.

TO BE EXAMINED

"She will be given an examination immediately," Dr. Bryan said. "If we find that she is not mentally incompetent, we shall insist that her father call here for her and take her out.

"If her husband came today and proved legally her guardian I would release her. Of course, the question of whether her marriage is legal or not is pertinent at this time.

"She will be kept in a private room away from other patients to protect her rights while the examination is made."

Asked if he had any opinion as to whether she would be released, he said:

"Do you think that because she went out and had a little fun with someone she is insane?"

OUT ON PAROLE

As a result of a transaction involving purchases at Worcester stores, she was sent to the hospital for a 10-day period of observation last March, he revealed. At the end of that time court committed her for 30 days, but she remained only 20 before the hospital decided she could be released, on parole, in custody of her family.

"I don't want to go up there," she cried when located at the hotel this morning.

Sheriff Keefe, a resident of Oxford, said that he convinced her family that she should be restrained.

"I got sick of the publicity she was bringing on the family and the town," he said. "She acted suspicious of us after leaving Boston, but it was not until we turned into the hospital grounds that she kicked up a fuss and began to scream. When she got out of the car she fled from the hospital and I had to chase her. It was with difficulty that her brother and I got her into the building."

Until the discovery that her husband was aboard the Mauretania, pursuing his clerical duties as assistant to the purser, her family had steadfastly maintained that she was with him on a honeymoon at Niagara Falls and in Canada.

CLEARS MYSTERY

So—although new complications entered—was cleared up much of the mystery which has surrounded the Oxford wedding since Wednesday when State police furnished "Commander Sir" Bramwell with an escort from Worcester to Oxford in order that he might not be delayed and keep the 200 thrilled guests waiting.

Beauty to Wed

DOROTHY SEBASTIAN was on the wedding trail to Las Vegas, Nevada, today, with William Boyd, screen star. The filmland couple left Hollywood last night, announcing they would be married at Las Vegas today. It is the second wedding for both.

MISS SEBASTIAN FILM STAR, WEDS

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Of course, the bridegroom who will share the joyous Yuletide festivities with his beautiful bride is none other than William Boyd, also well known in motion picture circles as an actor of ability.

Dorothy and Bill will reach Las Vegas some time today. They are motoring to the Gretna Green in Nevada to have the ceremony performed, and as soon as the final words are spoken they will return to Hollywood to spend Christmas.

With an excitement in her voice that is unlike the calm Dorothy, whom I knew in New York and later in Hollywood when Dame Rumor had her engaged to Clarence Brown, famous director, I heard the news.

"I am so thrilled," said Dorothy, "and so happy. Bill and I wanted you to know first. We are trying to keep our wedding a secret until it is all over."

"Not that this matters," she said, "I would marry Bill if I had to wear a gingham dress and a sunbonnet."

RUM BOAT SUNK, 4 ARRESTED

Woods Hole, Dec. 19 (INS)—Chased by several coast guard patrol boats from the Woods Hole base, the alleged rum-running speedboat Albertina of Chatham was captured today near the entrance to Buzzard's Bay, only to sink after fire destroyed the craft to the waters edge.

Four men were arrested and 40 cases of liquor seized before the 41-foot speedboat went to the bottom. Coast guard officials claimed the speedboat burst into flames from a fire in her engine. The Albertina slowed down after a warning shot was fired.

One of the men arrested was Joseph A. Healey, of Westport. The speedboat was said to have been owned by Milton Healey of Chatham.

Immediately following this decision, prohibition authorities in Jersey City issued three prohibition search warrants and announced that they would ignore the judge's decision.

If "wets," following the decision of a United States judge, announced that they would pay no attention to it, that would be criticized.

CAPONE TO DIE IN CHAIR, SAYS JUDGE LYLE

"Scarface Al" Is Blamed by Chicago Jurist for Two Recent Murders

Chicago, Dec. 19 (AP)—Judge John H. Lyle today was quoted as saying efforts would be made to send Alphonse (Scarface Al) Capone, gang chief, to the electric chair in connection with the slaying of two men.

"We will send Capone to the chair, if it is possible to do so," said Judge Lyle, who issued a vagrancy warrant for Capone several months ago. "He deserves to die. He has no right to live."

Speaking before the Chicago Safety Council, the judge mentioned Capone's name in connection with the killing in 1920 of "Big Jim" Colosimo, reputed "vice-lord," and also in connection with the death of another man whose name he did not reveal.

MANY CHILDREN ASK AID

Christmas Day will be without any help just haunts my mind."

Another letter was received from a Brighton man who is the father of seven children, the oldest 13.

He writes, and his statement has been substantiated, that he has undergone four operations this year, adding sadly:

"I have been able to do very little work this year so will not be able to do much for the children."

DESTITUTE AT 75

Then there is the woman of 75, broken in health and almost blind, who devoted the best years of her life to the education of a son, only to be left alone and destitute in her old age.

Despite her desperate position, she steadfastly refused to ask for charity, but neighbors have written in her behalf.

These are only a few of the pitiful cases which are being daily brought to the attention of the Boston Evening American Basket Fund Editor.

Each case is thoroughly investigated and the authenticity of the claim established.

MORE AID VITAL

To do so, however, he must have donations from generous readers whose hearts go out to the poor and needy at this time of peace on earth, good will toward men.

Send in your contributions, no matter how small, and rejoice in the knowledge that you have helped to bring joy at Christmas time into one desolate home at least.

Natalie Hammond Plant Employs 1500 Workers

New York, Dec. 19 (AP)—Natalie Hays Hammond, 25-year-old daughter of the inventor, John Hays Hammond, has invented, patented and is operating a metalizing process. Her factory in New York employs 1500 workmen trained by her.

"It's in the blood. I had to do it," she said.

Her enterprise has her dad's complete approval. He is one of few persons allowed to visit the Natalie Hammond plant. His daughter took him all around and showed him everything, she says.

Officer Harsh; Mrs. Coudert's Driver Ill

New York, Dec. 19—Magistrate Dodge could not believe that Mrs. Frederic R. Coudert, Jr., divorced wife of a prominent Republican leader, would let her chauffeur toot his horn after a traffic officer told him not to do so.

So he dismissed the charge yesterday in Traffic Court against the driver, Fred Rickens, 124 E. 56th st. Rickens said the officer had spoken to him so harshly for his first toots on the horn that he caused him to become ill.

SHAW AGREES WITH LEWIS THAT U. S. LIKES TO BE RIDICULED

SAYS PEOPLE HE ABUSES ADORE HIM

Would Call Him Cheap Skate if He Said Anything Nice About Them

A correspondent asked George Bernard Shaw for his opinion of Sinclair Lewis' address at Stockholm, in which the Nobel prize winner attacked present literary standards in America.

"As far as I am qualified to judge, Mr. Sinclair Lewis has said the right thing in the right way to the Swedish Academy, and to his own countrymen. They will not resent it. They expect to be flattered; but far from being grateful to their flatterers, they accept the tribute as a matter of course.

RIDICULE LIKED

"To rouse their interest, consideration and their undying devotion, all that is necessary is to hold them up to the ridicule of the rest of the universe. Dickens won them to him forever by merciless projections of typical Americans as windbags, swindlers and assassins.

"Mr. Lewis has knocked Washington off his pedestal and substituted Babbitt, who is now a European by-word. Thereby he has become so indisputably America's leading author.

SCOFFS AT U. S.

"I myself have been particularly careful never to say a civil word to the United States. I have scoffed at their inhabitants as a nation of villagers. I have defined the 100 per cent American as 99 per cent an idiot. And they just adore me and will go on adoring me until in a moment of senile sentimentality I say something nice about them, when they will at once begin to suspect me of being only a cheap skate after all."

Dominion Status Is Asked for India

London, Dec. 19 (AP)—In connection with the Indian round table conference Dr. S. J. Moonje, leader of the powerful orthodox Hindus, went to Prime Minister MacDonald today with an appeal for a government declaration granting India's demands for dominion status.

The negotiations, he indicated are degenerating into a vicious circle of counter-demands over the Hindu-Moslem problem. Observers believe the conference is moving toward a crisis over this issue.

Troops Quit Some Spanish Cities

Madrid, Dec. 19 (AP)—Announcement that troops would be withdrawn from several cities in which martial law has prevailed was made today.

At Barcelona the commanding general announced he would take out his men immediately, leaving only a handful of soldiers to guard factory workers.

Boston Train Kills Old Orchard Woman

Old Orchard, Me., Dec. 19 (AP)—Mrs. Martha Wilder, 60, was killed today by a Portland to Boston express train on the Boston & Maine Railroad as she crossed the tracks. A companion, Mrs. Alice Steeves, saw the train in time to avoid being struck.

The Judge Told a Bedtime Story

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Judge Clark said the Eighteenth Amendment was illegal. Now he says people want prohibition.

Judge, we'll need another amendment for that.

The judge says that only half the people want beer.

Why not compromise by starting the breweries on half-time?

If you drink the enforcement agents lash you to the mast.

If you don't drink you are in contempt of court.

There was plenty of excitement over Judge Clark's ultimatum. But now he begins to look like the final twilight of a nine-day wonder.

And all the wets got was a new deal with the same old cards.

We'll eat the stick.

The best we can do is to take Judge Clark's Christmas gift back and exchange it for a couple of government raids.

Deb Selling Yule Greenery

SOCIETY GIRLS ON YULE JOB

Debutante members of the Junior League turned out bright and early today to make deliveries of the Yuletide wreaths sold at 265 Beacon st. in aid of the Little House, South Boston's neighborhood clubhouse and recreation center.

Society girls whose names are bywords in social circles went at the work with a gusto that bespoke earnestness as they carried the wreaths to waiting trucks and then themselves piled in. The trucks made the rounds of Beacon st., Marlboro st., Commonwealth ave. and Bay State rd. and the wreaths were delivered personally by the girls.

Some of the debutantes who took part in the work were Miss Dorothy Porter, Anne Warren, Priscilla Simonds, Elizabeth Wells, Caroline Hunnewell, Harriet Fitz, Constance Wentworth, Ellen Cushing, Marian Dalton and Alice Means.

Gaming Arrest Costs City Official His Job

Chicopee, Dec. 19 (AP)—John J. Krawiec, welfare commissioner, was removed from office today by Mayor Henry Cloutier after he had pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $25 in district court to a charge of maintaining a gambling machine. Krawiec will later face a federal charge of violating the prohibition act as the result of a raid on his pool room, yesterday, in which the machine and liquor were seized by the police.

Negro Hidden From Mob in Girl's Death

Maryville, Mo., Dec. 19 (AP)—Declared by county authorities to have confessed slaying 19-year-old Velma Colter, a school teacher, Raymond Gunn, 30, Negro ex-convict, was held at St. Joseph today. He was rushed there to avoid mob violence.

Coast Guard Seizes Boat Running Dark

New London, Ct., Dec. 19 (AP)—Charged with running without lights, the speed boat Hither of New Bedford, Mass., was in custody of the coast guard here today. The craft, of fisherman type, was seized last night by the destroyer Wilkes, off shore south of Block Island.

MISS CONNOLLY LOSES FIGHT TO HOLD JOB

The State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, with one member dissenting, today reported to Governor Allen it upheld the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. in discharging Miss Margaret I. Connolly, telephone operator and treasurer of the Central Labor Union.

The board found the company did not violate the general laws of intimidation or coercion in dismissing Miss Connolly for accompanying a labor delegation which presented to the Department of Public Utilities a petition for a reduction and revision of telephone rates.

It expressed the opinion, however, that the company could have been less drastic in its discipline.

The report was signed by Chairman Edward Fisher and Herbert P. Wasgatt.

Samuel Ross, labor member, in his minority report, said Miss Connolly played a passive part in the presentation of the petition, and he saw no justification for her discharge.

Priest Starts on 6000-Mile Trek

New York, Dec. 19 (AP)—Father Bernard H. Hubbard of the University of Santa Clara, California, leaves today on the first leg of a religious-scientific trek through Northern Alaska. Father Hubbard, head of the geological department at Santa Clara, expects to travel 6000 miles over the Yukon trail by dog sled, laying over at 12 missions to administer spiritual duties.

Injuries Fatal to Woman Flier

Tonopah, Nev., Dec. 19 (AP)—Mrs. Clair Fahy, Los Angeles aviatrix, died here today from injuries suffered in a plane crash Monday. The body will be taken to Los Angels by airplane.

Mrs. Fahy's plane fell from an altitude of about 50 feet after it staleld and went into a nose dive as she was taking off for Los Angeles.

French Liner Is Delayed by Storm

Mr. Stopherd does his bit by assisting and entertaining the young couple at evening. (Staff photo.)

From Russia to Harvard

RUSSIAN CHIMES GO TO HARVARD

A $100,000 set of chimes, taken from a Russian monastery somewhere between Leningrad and Moscow has been presented to Harvard University by an anonymous donor, it was learned today by the Boston Evening American.

The bells, 21 in number, are understood to have been cast at different periods, from 30 to 100 years ago, and each weighs from 300 pounds to 14 tons.

They were taken out of the monastery by the Soviet Government, which purposed to melt them down for the metal. When the donor learned of it, however, the donor paid the Soviets $100,000 for the bells.

They have been set up in Lowell House, one of the new Harvard dormitories, and will ring in the New Year on January 1.

With the chimes came from Russia an old bell ringer, who will teach some man from Boston or New England how to operate the bell mechanism, which is entirely different from the carillon mechanism.

MacDonald Facing Trades Bill Test

London, Dec. 19 (AP)—Ramsay MacDonald's Government will face severe test after the holidays, when debate begins on the trades dispute bill.

This measure is to nullify the law passed by Stanley Baldwin's Government after the general strike of 1926, removing some of the labor unions' rights, including those of sympathetic strikes and peaceful picketing.

Jury Gets Vermont Murder Case

Montpelier, Vt., Dec. 19 (AP)—The case of Elvin A. Wheeler, charged with the murder of Birnie Pecor in Roxbury on Nov. 10, was given to the jury today.

Wheeler is said to have shot Pecor while under the influence of liquor, after Pecor's wife had told him that Pecor abused her. Mrs. Pecor was employed by Wheeler as his housekeeper while Pecor was serving a prison sentence for larceny.

French Parliament Adjourns to Jan. 13

Paris, Dec. 19 (AP)—Parliament adjourned today until Jan. 13. Thus for a while Theodore Steeg remains premier and his ministry continues as the French government. The opposition threatens to turn upon the ministry as soon as the holiday recess is over. It was believed that at the first opportunity the Steeg government may ve voted out of office.

4-YEAR FRAUD IN JEWELS LAID TO COUPLE

An Investigation by Postal Inspectors Reveals Conspiracy to Steal Through the Mails

A scheme by which a man and a girl defrauded jewelry manufacturers of many thousands of dollars over a four-year period has been uncovered as a result of investigation by postoffice inspectors, it was announced today.

J. Donat Jacques, 30, and Rose Desjardine, 21, who were arrested in Lowell a week ago and are now in jail awaiting trial for conspiracy to steal, must stand trial in federal court for use of the mails to defraud jewelers in Worcester, Providence and New York.

The scheme, it is charged, was to order jewelry under the names of various firms, and either pawn or sell it when it was received.

Gunmen Steal Haverhill Taxi

Methuen, Dec. 19—Two men, who took a taxicab at Haverhill railroad station last night, forced Reginald W. Carey, 25, of 18 Henry st., Haverhill, driver of the cab, to get out of his cab near the New Hampshire line, and sped away with the cab, leaving Carey stranded a mile from the nearest house.

Carey reported to Methuen police that he was compelled to leave the cab at the point of a gun.

Silver Loot Found in Worker's Room

Attleboro, Dec. 19—Loot valued at $2500, mostly in the form of unfinished silver toilet ware, was recovered from the room Henry J. Mongeau, 31, of School st., last night by police after Mongeau confessed he had been taking silver from the shop of Saart Bros. Co., silverware and novelty manufacturers, for the past month.

DIVORCE GIVEN TO THAYER

Worcester, Dec. 19—Judge Atwood today handed down a decision granting a divorce decree to Fred B. Thayer, wealthy Grafton sportsman, and denying the petition of his wife, Mrs. Jane H. Thayer.

The decree was granted on the ground of misconduct, and the petition of Mrs. Thayer was dismissed for lack of evidence.

In their cross actions the couple charged each other with misconduct, Mrs. Thayer naming two women, and also charged cruel and abusive treatment. Each made charges of intoxication.

Near the close of the case a sensation was caused by the arrest of John P. Crowther, an Englishman, who had testified to spying on Mrs. Thayer and Albert Desjardin, the Thayer chauffeur.

The arrest was made in connection with a $25,000 suit for breach of promise by Miss Anna Daly, who was later sent to a hospital for observation as to her sanity.

The Thayers have been prominent in Worcester and Grafton society. Thayer, an aviation enthusiast, built and aviation field at Grafton.

5 Shopping Days to Christmas

To men who acquire
at Christmas-time

SOME men can do a bang-up job of selecting a gift for a woman, but not many. If you are like most of us, you are going to need help—and plenty of it. Here's how to do the thing in this day and age of specialization.

Many Boston stores for years have been helping women to make up their own minds about the things they buy for themselves. These stores are filled with the things women want, wear, use and enjoy. Many of them have special shopping counsellors and guides to help you, to say nothing of the trained selling staffs who wait upon you intelligently and efficiently.

No matter how vague or incomplete they seem to you now, take your Christmas-shopping-for-a-woman ideas to any of Boston's good stores and let them help solve your problems while stocks are new and before the rush begins.

JAMAICA PLAIN FAMILY FACES EVICTION

A Jamaica Plain mother and her family of five children face eviction from their home, because of failure to pay rent.

"We are out of gas, electricity, coal, and wood," writes this mother in her appeal for aid to the Boston Evening American Helping Hand Department. This family is undernourished and needs substantial food.

Anyone wishing to aid this family may obtain the address by calling Liberty 4000, Helping Hand Department.

FACE EVICTION
Refer to Case 135

We are about to be evicted from our flat on account of lack of money to pay rent. I am the mother of five children, ages 7 to 14 years. We are out of gas, electricity, coal and wood. We are weak from malnutrition.

If someone could help us, they will be doing us a great deed and will be much appreciated. The Boston Evening American is certainly doing good by allowing the poor people in this column to ask for help when it is so much needed.

This woman lives in Jamaica Plain. Anybody wishing to aid may call the Boston American Helping Hand, Liberty 4000, and refer to Case 135.

WIDOW ASKS BASKET
Refer to Case 136

I am a widow with five children and nobody working at home to support us so I ask you if you will kindly send us a basket for Christmas. We will be very very thankful as we shall not be able to have anything if you don't. I thank you very much and hope you will not disappoint us for Christmas as the children will be all waiting for something.

This woman lives in Cambridge. Anybody wishing to aid may call the Boston American Helping Hand, Liberty 4000, and refer to Case 136.

EIGHT WANT BASKET
Refer to Case 137

I would like if you will send a Christmas Basket. There are eight in the family, one working. I just lost a boy three weeks ago, 21 years old. The father was in the hospital for six months and works but a few days. There are six boys home, all go to school but one. The ages are 10, 11, 13, 15, 16, 22.

There is no coal. I am sick and lost all my strength worrying about my boy.

This woman lives in West Roxbury. Anybody wishing to aid may call the Boston Evening American Helping Hand, Liberty 4000, and refer to Case 137.

BOY NEEDS CLOTHES
Refer to Case 138

I have an eight-year-old brother and he needs stockings and blouses, and I wonder if possible if you can send him something. I do not care about myself but I want my brother to have some kind of a Christmas if possible.

My father is dead and my mother works, so it is very hard for us to get along. I hope to hear from you.

This girl lives in South Boston. Anybody wishing to aid may call the Boston American Helping Hand, Liberty 4000, and refer to Case 138.

Fannie Hurst For Universal Divorce Law

The fourth of a series of interviews in an unusual discussion of divorce laws is published today in the Boston Evening American. It presents the views of Fannie Hurst, popular novelist, as expressed to a Boston Evening American reporter.

The question under discussion is whether divorce laws should be more liberal or more stringent. The series will be continued daily, presenting the views of outstanding advocates and opponents of liberal divorce.

The interview with Miss Hurst follows:

DIVORCE CRITIC—Fannie Hurst, prominent novelist, who is a believer in divorce, but not as it is practiced at present. She urges a universal divorce law.

Do I believe in divorce?

Yes.

I can answer the question that way. But I must qualify at once. I do not believe in divorce the way it is practiced.

Divorce is a man-made law. And men, thus far, have failed to realize that women have become people.

When the economic and social status of women was changed—by law, the economic and social laws governing them should have been changed.

LAW MAKERS LAX

When social existence for both men and women became so intensified, and the nervous organisms became so highly developed that the art of living together has now become the most delicate understanding in the world, the makers of laws should have been quick to sense the change.

In the human race each generation becomes more sensitive. The pleasures of half a century ago become the abominations of today. Mate a mental product of the 1860's with one of the 1930's and what must result. A dissolution of the compact.

It is unthinkable that the dissolution of that contract must be accompanied by lying, cheating, immorality and the desecration of the laws which we should be able to respect.

FOR UNIVERSAL LAW

To me the solution must come through a universal law—a federal law which shall govern all people alike. Humanity is the same whether on 67th st., New York, or Chestnut st., Philadelphia.

There should be no cause for divorce in Nevada that is not a cause for divorce in New York. Either it is a good cause everywhere or it is no cause at all.

I have heard the cry, "save the home." It is my cry, "save the respect of the home."

Morality is not a matter of legislation. It is almost ridiculous to contemplate an existence of compulsory propinquity. Yet, what else does the law governing divorce in New York State strive to enforce?

Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy, whose opinions are based on the experience of hearing hundreds of divorce cases, will be the subject of the next interview in this unusual series. The interview with Justice Levy will be presented in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

Readers of the Boston Evening American are urged to express their opinions on this question of divorce. Letters should be addressed to the Discussion Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. The most interesting letters will be published in the Boston Evening American.

Wages Made Safe, One Week, at Least

Oklahoma City, Okla., Dec. 19 (AP)—Justice of the Peace Paul Powers is not one to lag behind the season. The following notice is nailed to his door:

Boy Skips to New York Rather Than Face Father's Ire

New York, Dec. 19 (AP)—Dismissed from school on account of his conduct, Sidney Reich, 15, of New Bedford, Mass., struck out for New York several days ago rather than face his father.

Early today he was found sleeping in the vestibule of a Bronx apartment house, and was turned over to the children's society. Denying his identity at first, he broke down when he was confronted with a note fished from his pockets, bearing sad tidings from the school superintendent to one Samuel Reich.

CHAPTER 25

DICK BEGAN to get panicky again. He had implicit faith in Sid and knew that he knew what he was talking about.

"Oh [illegible], Dick—it will all come out all right," Sid assured him. He felt [illegible] he ought to say that, to give [illegible] some hope.

With that he left and went to the [illegible] of Abe Vance. He told Vance the entire story, just as Dick [illegible] it to him.

"Well, I believe you, Cavanaugh, but I won't take the case."

"Why not?"

"Because nobody will believe it, Cavanaugh—I can't save him—his affair with the girl—the whole chain of events, is going to send him to the chair!"

"Oh, come now—"

"I won't take the case—I can't afford to take a case that's bound to be lost. Mark my words, that chap is going straight to the chair!"

"You don't mean that they can send him to the chair when he didn't actually murder her, Vance!" said Sid.

The very crafty and able criminal lawyer, Abe Vance, nodded.

"I certainly do, Cavanaugh. More than a plenty of innocent men have been sent to the chair. If I were writing a story I couldn't concoct a situation so certain of ending in a legal execution as this chap has got himself into."

"You could save him, Vance."

"I could not."

"But a man is legally held to be innocent until proven—"

"Poppycock! That's a fallacy. Nowadays a poor devil has to prove his innocence."

"That Viola Forsaythe was guilty—it was cold-blooded murder and you—"

"Sure I did. She was a good looker and had a good story. No, I simply can't afford to take the case. Why don't you get Rogers? He's a mighty good lawyer and if anyone can move a jury with a plea, he can."

"Help, Dick"

Sid left, very much disappointed. He had to go back to the office. He knew that it couldn't be kept out of his paper. But he went to his chief and told him the true story. Instead of the flashy

"GIRL BRUTALLY MURDERED FIGHTING TO SAVE HONOR"

that the rival paper had, the Globe's headline was:

"ACCIDENT," SAYS POLICE.
"ACCIDENT," SAYS WALTERS

Sid found a memo on his desk to call a certain number. It made him almost ill, because it was Cicily Walters's telephone number. The news had reached her, in some manner.

With a heavy heart he called her up. He could tell by her voice that she was crying.

"I must see you, Sid. Why didn't you come to me at once?" she said.

"I had to do what I could for Dick, first, dear. I was coming over soon. How did you hear?"

"A detective has been here, searching Dick's room. I made him tell what it was about—mother is under a doctor's care and a nurse has just arrived—I can't talk—come, Sid."

He promised and hurried over to see her.

"If I could help you—"

"Help Dick, Sid—make them believe the truth—I know he couldn't have done that."

"He didn't do it. The very best thing is to tell the whole truth about it, Cicily."

The doctor came down just then.

"Are you Mr. Cavanaugh?" he asked.

"Mrs. Walters wants to see you," he went on when Sid nodded. "I told her I'd send you up if it were you. I wanted to see you first. Be sure and tell her it's all wrong—anything else might be fatal."

He went up to see Dick's mother. It was an ordeal, but he assumed a cheerful expression and assured her that it was all a terrible mistake, that the girl was accidentally killed by a fall and he added that it would all be straightened out.

This had the desired effect. Mrs. Walters took the medicine then she had refused before, knowing that it was something to induce sleep.

Told Cicily

Sid went back and told Cicily the entire story.

"And you knew about the girl and didn't tell him? You didn't tell me? Oh, Sid, how could you? How can I ever forgive you? If you had told him this wouldn't have happened."

Once more Sid had to explain that Dick would have never believed him, might even had tried to fight him, but Cicily wouldn't believe that.

"It's too terrible for words—how will he get out of it?" she demanded.

"God knows," Sid groaned.

"Oh! You feel—you think—"

"I'll help to the last ditch. I'll do everything humanly possible."

"Sid!" Cicily's cry was one of anguish, "the way you speak, the way you look—you are afraid, yourself, aren't you?"

"Yes, Cicily, I'm afraid. I'm sick with fear, but we won't give up."

"It will kill mother," she whispered, "and I—I can't go back to work tomorrow. I can't bear to go out—to have people stare at me—what will we do?"

"I'll come over here and live—I'll look out for you, Cicily."

"It isn't that—we aren't so poor as all that. Mother has considerable money——"

She began to sob. He tried to comfort her.

"I don't know, Sid—I feel that you were cruel not to have warned Dick—I feel terribly about it and your failure."

"You couldn't feel any worse than I. I'll be at the office until two or three in the morning. I'm going to see that the story isn't too raw—I'm going to see that Dick gets a square deal. And there are a thousand things, plans, I have. I'm going to drag a lot of people into this case. Telephone me at the office, dear—if anything happens—if you need me."

He left her with a heavy heart. He was afraid she would never forgive him, and yet he was thoroughly convinced that if he had told Dick the truth there would have been a serious row. But a serious row would have been better than this, he admitted.

Careful Study

Back at the office he took the material the police reporter brought in and the material the other reporters had secured, and from it wrote the story. He did the very best thing he could. He intimated that if the case came to trial there would be some startling revelations concerning the true character of Ethel Simmons. But the fact remained that the medical examiner reported that the girl had been attacked and that Richard Walters was held on a charge of murder.

For hours after that he made notes. People he would see, things he would tell whatever lawyer he secured to defend Dick, memos of bits of evidence he believed would help. He was sorry Cicily hadn't called him, and worried. She might never forgive him.

The next day he went to see Herbert Rogers, the lawyer Abe Vance had suggested. He told him the entire story, and gave him many points.

To his relief, Attorney Rogers agreed to take the case. Sid called on Cicily. Her mother was somewhat better, but still in a highly dangerous nervous state from the shock. Cicily, it seemed to Sid, was constantly reproaching him with her eyes. He had little to offer her in the way of encouragement except the news that Herbert Rogers, one of the best and most respected lawyers in the city, had agreed to defend Dick.

Sid and Rogers went to see Dick that afternoon.

"I've got that house two-thirds paid for, you put it on the market and get my equity out of it. I'm going to need the money," was the first thing Dick said.

He hadn't slept or eaten. Evidently he had been thinking all thoughts were not conducive to calm nerves.

Lawyer Rogers had him tell his story again. He told it exactly as he had told it to Sid.

Quizzed by Lawyer

"Now," Rogers said, "who were her closest friends?"

There was no need to mention the name, Dick knew that he meant Ethel.

"Nissinger, I suppose," he answered.

"Girl friends, I mean."

"A married woman, a Mrs. Mabel Shelton who lives in Hampton—and by the way, her home is only a short walk through the grove to Nissinger's cottage—I wonder—God, if I could get out and do a little detective work—"

He paused and looked hopefully at his lawyer.

Rogers shook his head. "It can't be done, Walters, but if I am not mistaken, Cavanaugh here is a mighty good friend and better able to do detective work than you. What's on your mind?"

Dick pointed at the newspaper.

"All this rot about her being a pure little angel—and I know better," he said.

"The truth will come out at the trial, Dick—we don't want to show our hand now. I'll get busy at once. What other tips can you give me?"

"Well, you know Bart Culver, the actor. He told about two girls fighting over him and tearing each other's clothes half off—both of them having Nissinger's initial tattooed on them. I've got a hunch that Eth—that she was one of them."

Will Perjure Self

"That's a good lead. You think up everything else you can that will help me dig into that girl's lurid secret life. Don't write it out, make notes in such form as only yourself can tell what they are and we'll see you later. Don't talk to anyone—not a soul—the police will have a lot of tricks up their sleeve—such as putting some chap in here posing as a prisoner who will get chummy with you and try and get you to talk."

"Don't worry about that."

"Here's a note from Cicily, Dick. She can't come yet—I'll look out for everything at the house."

Sid left them. Rogers wanted to remain. He had things to say to Dick. Perhaps he didn't trust Sid too far because he wasn't sure whether it was all straight friendship or partly newspaper enterprise.

Sid hunted up Bart Culver. He was in his apartment, just having his breakfast as he was playing in a local attraction at the time.

"Your friend seems to be up against it," was Bart's rather jovial greeting, for he grinned as he said it. Sid was in no mood for that.

"Others will be up against it before I'm through, Mart."

"You would. What I want to know is who was the other girl who fought with her here when both of them ripped open their clothes and disclosed Nissinger's erotic stamp of possession."

Bart Culver lost his grin.

"Who told you that?" he demanded, uneasily

"An authority. You'll have to testify, you know."

"To what?"

"About your relations with the Simmons girl."

"Try and do it! Try and make me! Where do you suppose I'd stand, testifying against the character of a dead girl?"

"She's dead—it doesn't matter—plenty will be told about her at the trial—isn't it better to save an innocent chap from the chair?"

"Innocent? You know he did it!"

"But he didn't."

"You'd say so, Sid, but even if that is so, who will believe it?"

"That's what I'm after—evidence to show that the Simmons girl had no honor to fight for—evidence to make a jury believe the truth, that it was accidental."

"If you put me on the stand I'll perjure myself good and plenty before I'll testify."

"Tell me who the other girl was, then."

"I'm not mentioned to her?"

"No."

"Viola Forsaythe. And here's a keen tip you don't know about. A Mrs. Mabel Shelton at Hampton knows all about the Simmons girl's affairs—she helped cover her up."

Sid thanked her and went directly to Viola Forsaythe's beauty parlor. She had not arrived. He went to her apartment. In answer to the buzzer, Viola opened her door slightly. Sid promptly slipped his foot in the crack.

"What's the idea, Sid Cavanaugh?" Viola demanded. She had never forgotten his hostile attitude toward her during her trial for the murder of Kirk Thurber.

"This is the idea," Sid said, and as he spoke he yanked open her pajama coat and pointed at a letter "N," tattooed over her heart!

FRIEND OF MAN SLAIN HUNTED

Natick, Dec. 19—Peter Vacari, 42, of 13 Hartford st. died early today of a bullet wound believed to have been inflicted by a man he befriended two weeks ago and known only to the family as "Dominic."

State Police Officers Edward O'Neill and Edward Sherlock, of the district attorney's office, and Chief of Police Thomas P. Evans, are hunting Vacari's assailant. He will be charged with murder.

Vacari was found on the floor of his home by his wife, Mrs. Eugene Vacari, 25, on her return home from a shopping tour last night and died in Leonard Morse Hospital seven hours later.

She called police and Vacari was rushed to Leonard Morse Hospital. He failed to recover consciousness and died seven hours later.

Mrs. Vacari said her husband took his friend into their home two weeks ago because he was unable to find work. She also declared that before she went on the shopping tour her husband showed her $20 in a wallet. This money was gone when the police searched Vacari's clothing.

Borah Urges Loan to "Develop" Soviets

New York, Dec. 19 (AP)—A government loan to Soviet Russia or an export guarantee to American business men in order to develop Russian trade in this country, is favored by Senator William E. Borah, chairman of the foreign relations committee.

In a letter to Miles M. Sherover, New York exporter, Senator Borah says such measures would help finance Soviet purchases here and serve to hold Soviet trade.

"I think the greatest undeveloped market in the world awaits us if we are bold enough to seize it," Senator Borah writes.

Hearst Papers Win Praise of Educator

Los Angeles, Dec. 19—"I want to commend the Hearst publications for support of a department of education with a secretary of the President's cabinet. These papers have given more support to this splendid idea than any other publications in America."

Dr. Willis A. Sutton of Atlanta, Ga., president of the National Education Association, paid this tribute today to the Hearst newspapers.

Many Flee Oil Well Fire

PLANES USED IN BANDIT HUNT

Safford, Ala., Dec. 19 (AP)—Two airplanes joined the search today for four bank bandits believed hiding in Bogue Chitto Swamp three miles from here.

The ground forces of more than 400, guardsmen, sheriff's deputies and possemen, were reinforced with a new pack of bloodhounds.

The planes are equipped with machine guns and smoke bombs. The latter were to be dropped to guide the forces surrounding the swamp in the event the bandits should be spotted from the air.

The dogs replace those shot by the bandits.

The bandits, one white man and three Negroes, heavily armed, were reported by the officials of the Marion Junction State Bank at Marion Junction, Ala., to have obtained approximately $4000 in a robbery.

Slayer Is Hanged

Montreal, Dec. 19 (AP)—Paul Belisle was hanged today for the murder of Constable Dollard Pelletier. He collapsed when told there was no hope for life and had to be carried to the scaffold.

JOHNSON ON AIR AGAINST COURT

Washington, Dec. 19—Why the United States should remain out of the League of Nations Court will be explained by Senator Hiram Johnson, Republican, of California, in a radio address over the Columbia Broadcasting System tomorrow night.

Senator Johnson

Johnson will reply at length to Senator Capper, Republican, of Kansas, who urged American adherence in an address over the same network last Saturday.

Senator Johnson was one of the small, but courageous, Senate group that stood out from the start against ratification of the League of Nations a decade ago. Later their judgment was approved by a majority of more than 7,000,000 votes in the 1920 elections.

In his radio talk, Senator Johnson will advise against meddling in European affairs by joining the League Court.

Robbers Call Doctor in Hurry, Then Strip Him

Evanston, Ill., Dec. 19 (AP)—Dr. Wallace D. MacKenzie received a telephone call last night to hurry to an address several miles from home. He hurried to his garage to get his car.

"You are very prompt," said one of two holdup men who arranged the call, as they took his watch, his money and his automobile.

Fifty More Get Work on Christmas Mail

Fifty substitute clerks and laborers were put to work in connection with the distribution of Christmas mail by Assistant Postmaster William E. Hurley today.

Unless the public shows speed in mailing packages between now and Monday the chances of more substitutes being employed look dubious, according to Hurley, who is anxious to help out the unemployment situation.

Rankin Seeks to Aid Vets

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP) Removal of the ban against paying compensation to veterans who become ill through misconduct, or who pay income tax, is sought in a bill by Representative Rankin (D.) Mississippi.

HUNT MOTHER AS KIDNAPER

Lawrence, Dec. 19—Melvin Kirkman of High st. today reported to police that his son Melvin, Jr., 7, whose custody had been awarded him by the court on Wednesday, had been kidnaped.

Kirkman had his former wife in Probate court Wednesday on a charge of contempt.

He told Judge Dow she had failed to comply with an order issued at the time of the divorce, under which she was given custody of the child provided the father was permitted to see him.

Kirkman said he had not been permitted to see the boy, and Judge Dow reversed his former ruling and gave custody to the father with the provision that the mother might see the child.

Today Kirkman told Policewoman Beatrice V. Clarke that when he went to the home of Mrs. Grace Whitney in Winchester to take the boy away, the child was gone. He said Mrs. Whitney, who was caring for Melvin, Jr., told him a woman called for the boy yesterday.

PACIFISTS FIGHT SCHOOL ARMY

Washington, Dec. 19 (INS)—A campaign has been launched by pacifist organizations against the reserve officers training corps in colleges and other schools throughout the country, it was learned today.

Anti-war organizations have sent representatives before the House appropriations sub-committee on the war department.

Browne (R) of Wis., has introduced a bill to prohibit maintenance of R. O. T. C. units in high schools and secondary schools, not purely military in character.

Browne, who is 88, made a scathing attack on the war department, charging it with attempting to militarize high schools. He said in 1916 the chief of staff proposed the prettiest girls be made honorary members of the Cadet Corps "to make the Cadet Corps a romantic and thrilling experience for these young and impressionable boys."

What Hobby Should Phone Girl Have?

Editor Boston American:

Every one should have a hobby. Every business man should certainly depend upon a hobby for relaxation. This was the gist of what was said in Greater Boston lately by a nerve specialist.

If you have no hobby, create one. A man told me the other day he had a hobby of collecting newspaper cartoons that were very funny. These he pasted in a book and added to them daily. Back of a good ten cent cigar, he would open the cartoon book after dinner at night and just release some of his hidden laughter by looking over some of these funny cartoons.

He has several hundred of them. They are worth looking at. But here is my motive really for writing this letter, what is your hobby, reader? What would you advise for a telephone switchboard woman operator whose nerves are sapping? Just give us a few hints in the letter column.

N. M. MILLIGAN.

Old Time Gob Deplores Naval Disarmament

Editor Boston American:

You and all that served the good old U. S. Navy, 23 years ago, Dec. 16, 1907, will remember the White Fleet that sailed around the world on that inspiring cruise. Today, old timer, where is that fleet that so proudly waved the stars and stripes over the seven seas?

I'll answer that—sent its grave—bombed or junked—by naval disarmament propaganda, for which our leaders fell.

Now is the time to get together and demonstrate that we are self dependent. Let us stay out of the messes of other nations and protect our own. By so doing we will confer a favor on the American people, and save the the day all. Here's hoping you will put this in your paper for an old-time sailor of the White Fleet because it is of interest to thousands of readers of your paper.

EDWARD J. LENNON.

Education is Declared Convincing; Envy Ignorance

Editor Boston American:

For over 10 years we have been dealing with the prohibition question and we are no nearer in creating temperance. Nor would we improve conditions should we repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, for it would not only bring us back where we started, but would create a greater evil than our pre-prohibition days, seeing we would have to deal with as big a problem and a new generation.

We have arrived at a time when education is convincing, envy is ignorance. I received a letter before election from one of the chief members of a prohibition organization saying the Greater Boston Garden meeting was carried through with big success Sunday, Oct. 19, 1930. No doubt this is true as far as numbers are concerned, but can the supporters of the Eighteenth Amendment say they are satisfied with the results considering the time and money spent for the cause of prohibition?

I note the speakers at the Garden meeting repeated the same old story which has been argued over and over again without convincing force. The give and take method, such as we have had discussing the prohibition question, will never enlighten the public.

We as a people are suffering for the need of adjustment. The mind of the nation must be readjusted to think and act wisely before we can adjust the problems confronting us in this age.

This country is fully equipped with money, raw materials and 120,000,000 people desiring to solve the problem of nation-wide depression. There is no reason to lose faith in the possibilities of our vast resources to deliver us from our perplexed conditions, that is, if we recognize the cause and make an appeal for the remedy.

Church Slogan Good for Business Men

Editor Boston American:

While driving in my auto away from a city in the middle of this State my eye caught a sign, outside of a church, which has much wisdom for business men though directed to church goers.

The sign read:

Business needs this.

Lotteries Aided Building of Many Boston Churches

Editor Boston American:

Mayor Thompson of Chicago is backing a million dollar lottery to meet some of the expenses of that windy city. I do not know at this writing what success he is meeting with. But this I do know, it is a very old idea of raising money in New England.

Many of the old churches that are now historic relics in this section were constructed largely by lotteries.

King's Chapel and Christ Church in this city were built in part by lotteries. Lotteries were very popular in early days. They encouraged betting. Many men lived by betting in Boston during Colonial times. Real estate was often sold by lotteries. Milk st. property in two instances was conspicuously a good example of this.

Diplomas Give Women Big Thrill

Remember the thrill of the graduation exercises in "The Little Red Schoolhouse"? Well, many New England women received the same sort of thrill when at Martha's Cooking School, they received Miss Lee's diploma which means that henceforth father will not have to corrugate his forehead and reach for the digestive tablets when he takes his honored throne at the head of the supper table.

After the diplomas had been awarded to the Bride's and Business Girl's Class, which incidentally was the cue for many husbands to give a sigh of thanksgiving, stage and radio stars immediately became the center of attraction and by means of radio Station WLEX, carried the festivities of the occasion to the thousands who had to be content to hear of the gala event from the side-lines of their own [illegible].

FLOCK OF STARS

First came a duet by Betty Hannon and Phil Snyder, principals from Queenie Smith's show, "Street Singer." They were accompanied by Pierre de Reeves, of the same show. Miss Hannon and Mr. Snyder were tireless in their generous contribution of solo and duets hits from this popular show.

A popular idol of the evening was Ranny Weeks, leader of the H. P. Hood & Sons "Modern Concert" and music director for the Alfred Rooney Co., advertising agents. Ranny was an instantaneous hit. He gave one song after another and then he had to give more and more songs. In fact, after the party was over Ranny secretly confided to Miss Lee that he felt quite lucky to have escaped without giving away his blood-pressure. Ranny, however, also told her that being at her party was a lot more fun that making records for Victor or Brunswick.

Then came the refreshments—delicious Hood's old-fashioned ice cream, cookies from the Loose-Wiles Co., and marshmallows from the Campfire Co. As Ranny Weeks tasted Hood's ice cream, he was overheard to say, "Hooray, old home week!"

STAGE FAVORITES

After such a successful party, Martha Lee really deserves congratulations. In fact, it was such an enjoyable affair, that at the present time Ranny Weeks is seriously considering joining Martha's next class so that we will be assured of a reserved seat at the next graduation of Martha Lee's "Little Red Schoolhouse of the Air."

No less enjoyable was the graduation on Wednesday afternoon. An even larger number of ladies gathered to complete their course in Martha Lee's Cooking School and receive their diplomas. A splendid program of entertainment was furnished through the courtesy of Manager Finson, by the favorites from this week's bill at the Scollay Square Theater.

Mr. George Gould, the Publix Playboy, sang "Like a Dream," "Only A Rose" and the "Kiss Waltz," accompanied by Stanley Shultz on the piano. Mr. Shultz is another Publix Playboy, and in the intermission gave us a piano solo, "Manhattan Serenade."

MISS DAY SINGS

Miss Emily Day, who may be remembered as having sung the feature role in "Aida" at the Boston Opera House last season, sang the beautiful songs, "Bluebird," "Kiss Me Again" and "I Hear a Thrush."

The Gray Sisters dashed over through heavy traffic as soon as they were able to leave the stage at the Scollay Theater, and arrived just in time to give us two or three amusing and musical numbers, which were much appreciated.

And then more fun when our own graduating class were told to go ahead and do their own singing! And some of those ladies can really sing. At any rate, a wonderful time was enjoyed. Hood's Old-Fashioned ice cream, Sunshine cookies, and Moxie prizes were distributed, and the fall cooking class drew to a close.

Songbird

Moxie Given Graduates

Through the courtesy of Mr. Frank Archer, Sr., president of the Moxie Co., a case of Moxie was awarded at the graduation exercises to each of the following guests:

Miss Katherine Berry, 6 Oak st., Framingham, Mass.; Mrs. Mary Mahoney, 12 Unity ave., Beachmont, Revere, Mass.; Mrs. Frank Eaton, 72 Peterborough st., Boston; Miss Dorothy Storey, 9 Sabina Way, Belmont; Miss Helen Moran, 109 Ellery st., Cambridge; Mrs. Mary Lees, 137 Trapello rd., Belmont; Miss M. Bogie, 44 Pearson ave., W. Somerville; Miss Anna V. Coffey, 15 Anita ter., Roxbury; Mrs. Bertha Nelson, 4 Houson st., Cochituate.

Mrs. I. Wiswell, 7 Parkman st., Dorchester; Mrs. Bertha McCrillis, 95 Union st., Everett; Mrs. R. H. Norwood, 573 Norfolk st., Mattapan; Mrs. M. K. Mullaly, 32 Centennial ave., Revere; Mrs. C. A. Lesperance, 9 Lee st., Cambridge; Mrs. James Reardon, 12 Allen st., Arlington, Mass.

We hope Mr. Archer hangs up a big stocking and that Santa fills it up full for him!

Secret of Christmas Goose Rests With the Cook

In fable and in song the goose is typically a Christmas bird—and fortunately this Christmas he promises to be quite reasonable in price.

CLAM AND OYSTER BISQUE

Put the milk in a double boiler, allowing 1 cup milk to each person. While it is heating, put the juice from a pint of shelled clams or oysters into a saucepan, bring to a boil, skim carefully and add to the heated milk. Let both simmer together for a few minutes.

In a mixing bowl, rub together 1 tbsp. flour and 1 of butter, stir into the hot milk, and just before removing soup from the fire add a dash of red pepper.

HOT OVEN REQUIRED

The goose can be most successfully roasted in a self-basting roaster, which requires only a hot oven and proper timing. In choosing the goose, select one with a yellow bill, as red bills are a sign of old age. The breast should be soft, firm and thick, and the feet should be yellow and soft and fat. It is a young goose if the legs have soft down on them and the breast bone should be soft and almost transparent. The under bill should break easily.

Care must be taken in preparing the goose. Before it is drawn it should be singed, the pin feathers removed and then scrubbed with hot soap suds to open and cleanse the pores to allow the oil to be more easily extracted. Next draw the goose, then wash in cold water and wipe thoroughly, then wash in hot soda water in proportion of 1 teaspoon of soda to a quart of water.

Dry the bird thoroughly and sprinkle inside and out with lemon juice. Stuff the bird and dress. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and lay thin strips of fat salt pork over the breast for the first 30 minutes of roasting. A goose, being very fat, must not rest on the bottom of the roasting pan, but on the rack in a dripping pan. The oven should be hot and allow 20 minutes to the pound for roasting. Baste every 15 minutes with the fat in the pan.

USE DOUBLE ROASTER

Garnish with parsley and cranberries. A double roaster should be used if it is a large goose and the cover should be left off during the last half hour. The surplus fat may be saved for the family medicine chest.

Roast goose calls for apple sauce and this should be made of really tart apples.

POTATO STUFFING FOR ROAST GOOSE

2 cups hot mashed potato
1¼ cups soft bread crumbs
1 egg
1 tsp. sage
1 onion, chopped fine
¼ cup butter
¼ cup finely chopped fat salt pork
1½ tsps. salt
2 tbsps. chile sauce.

Mix together the potato, bread crumbs, butter, egg, seasonings and then add the pork, onion and chile sauce. Stuff loosely.

CHESTNUT STUFFING FOR ROAST GOOSE

Cook 1 tsp. finely chopped onion in 3 tbsps. butter until soft. Add ¼ lb. of sausage meat and cook 2 minutes. Then add 12 canned mushrooms chopped fine. Shell and blanch 1½ cups of chestnuts and cook them in boiling salt water until soft. Drain and mash them, using potato ricer. You should have 1 cupful of the strained chestnut puree to add to the dressing. Next add 1 tsp. of finely chopped parsley and salt and pepper to taste. Heat to the boiling point and add 1-3 cup of stale bread crumbs and 24 chestnuts which have been cooked and left whole. Cool this mixture before stuffing the goose.

HOW TO TRUSS BIRD

Just a word about trussing the bird. As the goose has short legs, it is trussed a little differently from a chicken or turkey. After putting in the skewers, the string should be wound twice around one leg and then around the other leg bone, leaving an inch of string between them. Then draw the legs with both ends of the string close to the back, cross the string under the back, fasten around the skewers and knot.

Geese are in the market throughout the year, and the best ones come from Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Grandmother's "green goose" was goose 12 weeks old.

The young geese which appear in the market between the first of September to beyond Christmas times are called "goslings" and have been hatched in May and June and fattened for market.

Here's Recipe for Excellent Starch

Mix starch of the desired amount in a cup or bowl and pour it in boiling hot water, stirring constantly, instead of pouring water on the starch. It will be clear and free from lumps and streaks.

Add a good pinch of salt for each quart and it will not stick. If a cloth is placed over the basin of freshly made starch no skin will form on the top.

For a good gloss on starched collars, first mix the starch with cold water, then add a lump of butter, size of a small marble and pour it in the boiling water.

To Clean Wringer Rollers

Kerosene is excellent for cleaning the rubber rollers of a wringer; after it has been applied rinse the rollers with warm water. Use a little shaving soap instead of oil on the wringer and avoid danger of getting grease spots on clothes in the wash.

Yule Gifts to Lee Readers

The FIRST DUTY OF THE HOUSEWIFE

DR. COPELAND, famous food authority, says: "The first duty of the housewife is to place upon the table a bread so appealing that it will be taken in liberal amounts by every member of the family. Spread with good butter, and eaten with good vegetables and meats, it will surely provide an abundance of essential food elements. Bake or buy bread made with unbleached flour, that is untreated and undoctored."

Oranges Just Picked From The Tree Taste Different—So Does Pork That Is Fresh

Have you ever picked and eaten an orange from a tree in California or Florida? If you have, you have realized the difference in flavor—for then, Oranges are Freshest. The golden juice from this product of stored up sunshine and fresh tropic showers is more tasty, the fibres more tender. It's a treat, for NOTHING TAKES THE PLACE OF FRESHEST.

New England Dressed Fresh Pork presents a perfect parallel. It comes to your dealer within 24 hours after being cut from the choicest Corn Fed Porkers brought on alive from the Grain Belt and dressed under U. S. Government Inspection. All the pristine freshness is in New England Dressed Fresh Pork when you serve it to your family. Well trimmed, lean, tender, a meat worthy of your daily menu—a food that will delight your guests.

The reason for its superiority lies in the undeniable fact that in Pork, as in Oranges, NOTHING TAKES THE PLACE OF FRESHEST.

Y. W. C. A. Cast to Present Christmas Plays

By NANCY BREWSTER

Santa Claus on every street corner, holly in the market place, and of course the spirit of Christmas has crept into the club world.

Tonight the Y. W. C. A. continues its program of holiday plays, pageants and parties. It plays tonight two of them, "Mimi Lights the Candle" and "The Empty Room." They will be presented in the auditorium of the Community Building at 140 Clarendon st.

The Little Theater, dramatic club of the Boston Y. W. C. A., takes the honors for the two productions. Miss Tryphena Burbank, who has been coaching the plays, has done splendid work with the club. Miss Catherine E. Grady of Winthrop, playing Mimi in "Mimi Lights the Candle," and Miss Grace Bagdasarian of Newton doing Mary of Nazareth in "The Empty Room," prove themselves real thespians.

The supporting cast of the first play has Miss Dorothy Challis, of [illegible] Plain as Mrs. Randall; Mr. C. H. Davis, of Everett, as Granny; Miss Edith G. Hanson, of Boston as Alice; Miss Grace Bagdasarian of Newton, as Frances; Miss Madeline Muldoon, as Jenny McBride; Mrs. Frank Mahaney as Tim McBride, and Mrs. H. P. Perrine as Laura.

In the cast of "The Empty Room" are Mrs. Frank Mahaney, Hamar; Miss Beatrice MacCuspie, Johanna; Miss Catherine E. Grady, Rebecca; Miss Madeline Muldoon, The Prophet; Mrs. H. P. Perrine, A Nobleman of Capernaum, and Miss Doris Challis, a servant.

Christmas carols will be sung with the audience joining. Eight o'clock is the time and the Boston Y. W. is the place. A grand time is going to be had by all.

Lithuanian Women's Club to Fete Orphan Children of Boston

Merrymaking is in vogue among members of the International Institute at the Y. W. C. A. On Sunday the Lithuanian Women's Republican Club will hold a Christmas party for orphan children of Boston. A one-act playlet will be given, games will be played and refreshments served.

On Monday night at 8 o'clock the Polish girls will entertain at the Jadwiga Club. Polish Christmas carols will be sung and the party will be flavored with real frolic from the native country.

Wednesday night will be "open house" with the institute. It will all happen at their new home at 190 Beacon st. Members of the Y. W. are invited to join in the carol singing and the merrymaking.

Women Musicians' Ass'n to Hear Alice Baker Sing Carols

Alice Baker will be featured at the meeting tonight of the Women Physicians' Association, which will be held at 8 o'clock at 1 Arlington st. Miss Baker will appear in Russian costume and will sing Christmas songs of that land. Mrs. Frederick Lamb, president, will preside at the meeting, and Mrs. Vida Rohde will be hostess.

Everett Friday Club Members to Present Pageant

Today's program at the Friday Club of Everett will be most unique. One of its members, Mrs. Nellie I. Grant, has written a short Christmas pageant. She will take the part of the Herald and will read the play. Other members of the club, including Mrs. Katherine Thorn, will assist in the production of the play. Music will accompany the acting and it will be directed by Mrs. Mabel F. Barstow.

The art and literary department of the Brighthelmstone Club of Brighton will hold its Christmas observance in their clubhouse this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Richard Lief of Allston will speak on the Passion Play. His lecture will be illustrated by pictures and souvenirs that he acquired at Oberammergau this season.

New Sweaters Look Like Blouses

By ANN ARDEN

MODEL from JAYS, INC.

ANN ARDEN broadcasts latest style news over WLEX every Tuesday and Thursday at 10.30 a. m.

SWEATERS HAVE come in town for the winter and are fast acquiring some of the formal grace of the popular blouse. It is considered quite the smart thing to wear one of these sweater blouses with our suit if you have one (is there anyone who hasn't some sort of a suit this season?). Or, teamed with a good-looking skirt, the sweater blouse will make a very dashing costume of its own.

• • •

A NUMBER of interesting details add freshness to this type of sweater. First of all, hand crocheting has returned to favor. Due to its exclusiveness, so far it is rather expensive, but its increasing vogue will soon bring it within moderate reach. One excellent model is sleeveless, with loose stitch yoke and an open lace stitch from the yoke down. Another is developed in an all-over lace stitch and has long sleeves. A hand-crocheted sleeveless bolero is another variation which we noted the other day—it is very chic with woolen frocks.

• • •

THE COSTUME pictured has many new smart details. The black velveteen skirt is slightly circular from curved seams, forming the hip yoke. The sweater-blouse may be worn tucked in or over the skirt top, and is widely striped black, gray and white. A knit ruffle outlines the V neck, and forms side jabot, a narrower ruffle accents the sleeve from wrist to elbow.

• • •

THE BERET-TOQUE is of black angora wool, shaped by slantwise tucks. Two brightly-colored quills are run through tucks on upper right side. Black reindeer pumps are worn; and the hose is the new needlepoint.

• • •

BOUCLE AND zephyr yarns are very good for the sweater that elaborates its detailing. Just like a blouse is a sweater in patterned zephyr yarn with tailored collar and tie in contrasting [illegible] crepe. Boucle is beautifully knit for another model which has a clever collar and buttoned opening. A high neckline gathered in with a silk cord lent individuality to yet another boucle sweater seen recently.

• • •

SWEATERS, NOT to be outdone by blouses, have embarked on new 1930 ideas of their own. They have cut their length almost in half to begin with—no self-respecting sweater would be seen below the waistline! Their sleeves are as varied as feminine ideas—they are long, short or completely absent. Some are striped, some are mottled, some are lacy in weave—and, in fact, you would never know the sweater of the new fashion era!

HOLLYWOOD INN SHOW SWELLS BASKET FUND

A large crowd of Goodfellows packed the Hollywood Inn to capacity last night as stars from the leading Boston stage shows and night clubs combined in another effort to aid the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund in the Inn's Theatrical Night.

The management of the Inn swelled the fund's total by donating the entire cover charge as well as a goodly percentage of the evening's receipts.

Every available place was taken by those who were only too glad to help those less fortunate than themselves and all were well repaid for the small amount expended. Like the huge Midnight Show of last Monday, the entire program was of stellar calibre and well received by the throng of guests.

MAREN PROMOTED SHOW

Great credit for the success of Theatrical Night is due to Tom Maren of the RKO booking offices and manager of the Hollywood Inn floor show. He promoted the entire production and also acted as master of ceremonies during a great part of the evening.

Sadie Banks, character actress from the play "Street Scene," was the hit of the show and received a big hand from the audience. Her imitation of Madame X, both in her own way and after the manner of Texas Guinan was the gem of the evening.

Fess Williams and his Royal Flush orchestra and the Hollywood Inn floor show were also well received. The regular Inn performers were as popular with the guests as the stage luminaries.

AL DUFFY ON JOB

Al Duffy, of the Shubert offices, who replaced Tom Maren as master of ceremonies as the evening went on, introduced several members of the cast of the Shubert production "Street Singer." Among these were Nick Long, Jr., one of the American stage's greatest eccentric dancers, Betty Hannon, Mildred Green and Helen Dubrow.

Others who donated their talents toward making the night the great success it was were Noreen and Jimmy, juvenile RKO dancers, Louis Fink, eccentric dancer, Paige and Flappey, nimble-footed colored boys, Georgia Kelly, "blues" singer, Al Branley, Stanley Brown and Gene Roundtree's Girls.

The "Six Lucky Boys," acrobats now performing at the Keith-Boston Theater, went through Boston's streets yesterday performing on a large truck and drawing the attention of the throng of Christmas shoppers to the Theatrical Night benefit.

PROGRAM BROADCAST

The management of the Christmas Basket Fund wishes to take this opportunity to give its sincere thanks to the management of the Hollywood Inn, to Tom Maren, who promoted the excellent show, to Al Duffy, who acted as co-master of ceremonies, to the host of talented artists who donated their services and last but not least to the host of Goodfellows who assured the success of the evening.

Glyn Tells Gracie He Has Wife at Home

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Wilda Gardner, bookkeeper in a hardware store, is in love with Logan Townsend. He is no Adonis, Wilda thinks, but "he has a rare smile." Wilda's father dies and her mother, Gracie, becomes a different woman when the lawyers say the estate will amount to $100,000. She plans a trip to Europe. Wilda has a wonderful time at a house party where Logan asks her to marry him. Myrtle, who is determined to win Logan, turns up at the dock as Wilda boards steamer for Europe. Logan's leave-taking is affectionate. Gracie finds an admirer on board the steamship.

By MAY CHRISTIE

(Copyright, 1930)

IF ONLY Wilda would get up and dance! What ailed the girl? Was she still moping for that Townsend ineligible"?

As though in answer to the widow's wish, up came a young man to their table. He'd partnered Wilda today in a deck-tennis competition. Wanted her to dance with him. Wilda consented.

It did rather cramp one's style to have one's conversation listened to by a grown-up daughter. . . .

Now what had Mr. Glyn just said? Oh, yes — something about sailing into a safe harbor.

Glyn Hesitated

His Eyes Narrowed

"Depends what kind of a harbor it is," commented Gracie brightly and encouragingly.

Mr. Glyn hesitated. Looked away from her. His eyes narrowed.

And when his reply came it wasn't exactly as she'd fancied.

He said: "A buccaneer has a pretty good time riding the wide ocean."

"How come?"

"Adventures. Thrills. And variety, which they say is the very spice of life—even for a woman."

"Hm. Mm." Of course he was only giving back to her her own suggestion. But— "I don't know as I'd fancy—for long—any dangerous way of living—"

He grinned. His face was rather flushed tonight. Across the dining-saloon she'd seen him with a bottle of Scotch at dinner, and maybe he'd had a glass too many?

He inquired, apparently apropos of nothing, "D'you ever read Balzac?"

"Never heard of him," confessed the widow.

"Then you ought to take a tip or two from him. He's a great connoisseur of human nature. He wrote: 'Handsome widows, after a twelve-month, enjoy a latitude and longitude with limit—'."

Why is it that when a woman is forty-five there seems to be something a little undignified in courtship?

Felt Foolish

Gracie Was Nervous

As she stood on the starlit deck with Oscar Glyn, Wilda's mother was disagreeably conscious of this fact.

Not that her behavior wasn't decorous enough.

But she felt foolish and thrilled and nervous and self-conscious.

"The years that the locust had eaten" . . . they weren't far off now, but disagreeably near and somehow accusing her.

Those long, tedious, "sensible" years of her marriage, rising up now to confront her.

She started at the words, then obediently leaned over the side of the vessel.

"A sort of incandescent light? It's beautiful."

"And so are you," said Mr. Glyn softly.

She made as though she did not hear him.

"Flashing. Then gone . . ." she resumed nervously.

"That's you again."

She straightened. He had touched her arm. The gesture made her tremble.

"It isn't me at all. I've never had the chance to be . . . elusive."

"You are. You tantalize me . . . you keep me at a distance."

"Ho. That is nonsense."

Encouraged thus, as he thought, Mr. Glyn moved nearer her.

But she moved back again.

BROTHER IN BATTLE TO FREE HER

Mabel Hunt to Be Re-examined in Bitter Controversy Now Being Waged in Court

The famous Slater mill millions are involved in a bitter fight in New York courts over the confinement in that State as an insane person of Mrs. Mabel Hunt Slater, at one time a society leader of Boston.

Carrying on the fight for the former social favorite are her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hunt of 180 Commonwealth av., and Mrs. Eleanor Hunt Diedrich of Brookline, a sister of Mrs. Slater.

Opposing Mrs. Slater's fight for freedom are her son, Horatio Nelson Slater, of Webster and New York, and her two daughters, Mrs. Esther Slater Kerrigan and Mrs. Ray Slater Murphy, both of New York.

ALIENISTS ENGAGED

The bitter fight was revealed when Mrs. Hunt filed her answer to an equity action to recover a diamond ring, valued at more than $5,000, Mrs. Slater was said to have given her last summer.

Through Bernard J. Killion, counsel, Mrs. Hunt denied that Mrs. Slater is insane, and said that the ring was not given to her as a gift but for the purpose of raising money to employ attorneys and alienists in an effort to have Mrs. Slater adjudged sane again, and released from confinement, which Mrs. Hunt said Mrs. Slater had told her was illegal.

Eminent New York counsel now is handling the case there and a move before the New York Supreme Court is impending to have Mrs. Slater examined. Dr. Ely Smith Jelliffe, prominent New York alienist, has been employed, and Dr. Winifred Overholser, of the Massachusetts department of mental diseases, Boston, has been consulted, Mr. and Mrs. Hunt admitted.

BOSTON KIN TO TESTIFY

In connection with Mrs. Hunt's answer to the suit for the ring in controversy, which she claims Mrs. Slater gave her to use in employing aid to effect her release from confinement, Mr. and Mrs. Hunt and Mrs. Diedrich are to be witnesses to the conditions under which the ring was handed over by Mrs. Slater.

All three visited Mrs. Slater at Craig House, Beacon, N. Y., where Mrs. Slater is said to be confined as insane, several times last summer. All three are ready to testify.

They charge that her commitment has been obtained, in the first instance, without giving her an opportunity to defend herself against possible fraud, and that her long confinement against her will was illegal.

Cardinal to Preside at Christmas Mass

Cardinal O'Connell will celebrate a solemn pontifical mass at 10 o'clock Christmas morning at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross. After the mass he will bestow the papal blessing on the congregation. There will be two midnight masses at the cathedral on Christmas eve, one in the upper and one in the lower church. These will be low masses.

Vivian Meagher to Wed

The engagement of Miss Vivian E. Meagher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene H. Meagher of Boston, and Frank H. Hackett, Jr., son of Postmaster and Mrs. Frank H. Hackett of Wakefield, has been announced.

In Asylum

MRS. MABEL HUNT SLATER, former Boston society leader, is opposed by her three children in her fight for freedom. She claims she is illegally confined as insane.

TRACING PIRATE RADIO IS TOLD

With a crowded courtroom listening intently, Asst. United States Att'y Hubert Thompson described in federal court today the workings of a discrete 'detector' mechanism by which an allegedly illegally operated radio set was found in a New Bedford house.

The assistant federal prosecutor was outlining the case against Joseph Travers of New Bedford, who had just gone on trial before Judge Lowell and a jury on an indictment charging that he operated a set illegally to send messages out of the country.

The case is the first of its kind locally under the Radio Act of 1927, and much technical testimony is expected.

Today 12 government witnesses, a number of them radio technicians, were sworn in.

WITNESS SAYS SEIZED GUN VANISHED

Disappearance From Revere Clubhouse Revealed at Trial of Guiffre

The mysterious disappearance of one of the guns seized by police after the shooting affray at the veterans' clubhouse in Revere last August, in which Morris Lerner was slain, was revealed today at the trial of Carmello Guiffre in Superior Court for second degree murder.

This gun, a small automatic pistol, was found by Patrolman Oda Sutton of the Revere police and handed by him to Lieut. Clair Chaney, who placed it on the floor of the billiard room of the clubhouse while he searched a closet.

A minute later it was missing. Those in the building at the time were all policemen, except the custodian of the clubhouse.

This was the testimony given today by Sutton and Lieut. Chaney, and when the latter disclosed that the gun disappeared Atty. John P. Feeney for the defence shot a query at Asst. Dist. Atty. John J. Murphy:

"Where is that pistol?"

"I don't know; I was going to ask you the same question," retorted Murphy.

Lieut. Chaney named the officers in the clubhouse at the time as Patrolmen Sharkey, Graham, Sutton, McKinley, Schroeder and Sergt. Tracy and himself. He said there may have been others, but he was not sure.

"When Patrolman Sutton gave the pistol to me it was dark and I asked for a flashlight," testified Chaney. "I laid the gun on the floor because I wanted to look into the stuff in the closet where amid the rubbish I found the cylinder of a revolver.

"I hadn't examined the gun to see if it was loaded. Things were moving too fast for that. I was pulling things out of the closet when Patrolman Graham called to me from the front vestibule, saying he had found another gun.

GREEN JACKET SHOWN

"I turned to pick up the pistol I had left on the floor, the one Sutton gave me, but it was gone. I went to Graham's side, but the gun he had, while it was an automatic pistol, was larger than the one Sutton gave me and was of Spanish make."

Patrolman Sutton testified to finding the automatic, which later disappeared, also a .38 caliber revolver, which he said he found in the living room of the clubhouse and several exploded shells.

The Spanish automatic, found by Graham, was admitted as an exhibit earlier in the day after Lieut. Cornelius Cronin had identified it by number. A green jacket, alleged to have been worn by Guiffre, was also admitted as an exhibit.

Cronin said Graham reported finding the automatic in the vestibule of the veterans' clubhouse.

He testified also that he asked Guiffre if the green jacket and certain other clothing belonged to him and that the defendant nodded his head in the affirmative.

Accountant Held in $5000 Larceny

Russell W. Cronk of Dedham, former accountant for the Dedham Water Co., in Norfolk Superior Criminal Court today was held for the grand jury on an indictment charging larceny of $5000 from his former employers. Cronk pleaded not guilty and was remanded to jail in default of $2500 bail.

Another Rum Load 'Lost in Transit'

INSURANCE MEN JOIN TO WIPE OUT COMPULSORY LIABILITY-LAW

DEMERIT PLAN IS BOOSTED AS BEST

Compulsory System Held to Be a Crime Breeder and Source of Loss

By JOHN T. LAMBERT.

The powerful insurance interests of Massachusetts will attempt to secure repeal of the compulsory automobile liability insurance law by the incoming session of the Legislature, it was learned authoritatively today.

In the place of the compulsory system from which they are deriving $30,300,000 in premiums annually and which has been the source of [illegible] and interminable battles in the Legislature, they will attempt to have established a non-compulsory insurance plan based on the New Hampshire and Connecticut laws.

CLAIM THEY ARE BIG LOSERS.

The principal reasons why they will seek annulment of the law are these:

1. That it has failed to establish safety on the highways.

2. That it is expensive to the automobilists and yet caused the insurance companies a net loss of about $1,000,000 a year.

3. That the irritations of the law are causing an animus against insurance companies and a possible loss of goodwill which they do not want to sustain.

4. That the law permits conspiracies to extort excessive damages and contributes to a general disrespect of all laws.

The insurance companies will contend to the Legislature that the compulsory insurance [illegible] careless drivers [illegible] the sites of traffic and jeopardize [illegible] and property.

They will argue that the automobilists are losing their sense of personal responsibility and [illegible] abandon because

"I'm insured and the companies will pay."

PREDICT BIG DEATH RECORD

They insist that the ratio of accidents has increased beyond the proportionate increase of cars on the roads and that the final records of 1930 will approximate the "slaughter year" of 1929.

The companies also will [illegible] that one-half of one per cent of the drivers are [illegible] forcing high insurance rates upon the 99.5 per cent who drive with care.

Also, they claim that loopholes in the law permit about 10,000 cars to be operated constantly in the State without insurance to compensate unfortunate persons for the injuries inflicted upon them.

They are now at work upon a non-compulsory auto insurance [illegible] which they will submit to the legislature.

"SAFE" UNTIL IT HAPPENS

[illegible] automobilist [illegible] if he desires. Every automobilist would be regarded as safe [illegible] the time of his first accident. [illegible] then would be revoked until he deposited with a Board of [illegible]

[illegible] decrease in accidents up to the time that the compulsory system was adopted. [illegible]

CONNECTICUT PLAN LIKED

[illegible] the protection of compulsory legislation.

It is understood that all but two of the [illegible] companies engaged in [illegible] of business in Massachusetts will take part in the campaign of repeal.

BOGUS CRIPPLE GO-BETWEEN IN DRUG PLOT

Tax Driver and Another Man Jailed After Capture in the South End

How a bogus crippled beggar, who picked up his crutches and ran when arrest threatened, acted as a go-between in the alleged narcotics trade of a Boston taxicab driver, was related today by police in municipal court.

Irving Diamond, the taxi driver, of Rutland sq., South End, was given a year in the House of Correction for possessing narcotics. He appealed and was held in $1000 by Judge Good for the Superior Court.

GIRLS LED TO CAR

James Foley, alias James G. Griffin, [illegible] charged with being an addict, was sentenced to six months and likewise appealed, being held in $1000.

Sergt. Duncan and Special Officers O'Brien and Dolan of East Dedham st. station, told of watching Diamond's privately owned automobile, which was parked at Tremont and West Newton sts., South End.

There was nobody in the car, but, according to the officers, six persons, [illegible] two girls, were led to it by the "cripple" after they had handed him notes.

The officers waited until Griffin, who is alleged to have a record as an addict, appeared on the scene. Then they acted.

"CRIPPLE" ESCAPES

The "cripple" fled, but Griffin was captured. Nothing was found on him, but there was testimony that he [illegible] Judge [illegible] drug.

The car was then [illegible] and according to the police, [illegible] of morphine were found hidden under the [illegible] in the roof. The car was taken to Station 5 and Diamond was arrested when he went after it.

Diamond denied knowing the morphine was in the car and Griffin testified that he was after dope.

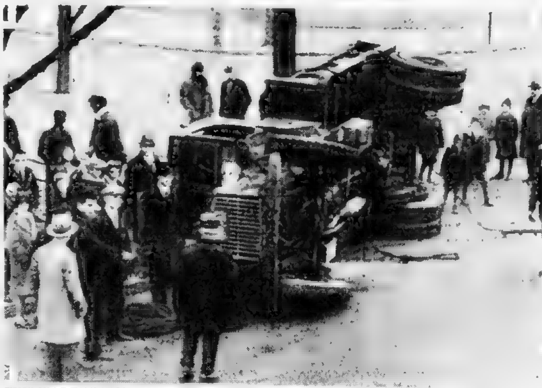
Frost Plays Havoc at 'Accident Corner'



THIS WAS THE WORST of a half dozen auto accidents at Adams and Bowdoin sts., Dorchester, today, when the frost on the pavement caused motor cars to do all sorts of cranky things. One car spun around five times, another four, and the wheel of one snapped off. When this truck skidded and turned over, one man of four hurled out was hurt seriously and was taken to the City Hospital. (Staff photo.)

3 CARS IN SKID ACCIDENTS AT SAME CORNER

One Man Hurt as Frost Makes Driving Unsafe at Adams and Bowdoin Sts.

Heavy frost which coated the pavements early today caused a number of automobile accidents at Adams and Bowdoin sts., Dorchester, and resulted in serious injury to one man.

Paul Cardilo of 5 Duncan st., Dorchester, was taken to City Hospital with injuries suffered when the truck in which he was riding with four other workmen skidded and tipped over. It was driven by Charles A. Burns of 13 Buttonwood st., Dorchester.

At the same corner a car driven by a woman spun around five times, shot over the curb and struck a wall, but no damage resulted.

A rear wheel on another car was broken when it skidded into the curb, and still another made four complete turns on the slippery pavement.

5 ARRESTED IN LOTTERY RAID

Police arrested five men and seized seven presses and thousands of lottery tickets in a raid today on a printing plant on Brookline st., Cambridge. A large crowd watched the raid.

Those arrested said they were John Fellows of Washington st., Somerville, John McGuigan, Boylston st., Cambridge, Fred Bennett, Ames pl., Cambridge, William Newell, Tremont st., Boston, and Joseph Sullivan, Longfellow st., Dorchester. They were charged with having lottery tickets in their possession.

Stanley Chmielewski of Somerville was given two sentences of three to five years each in State prison by Judge Sisk in Middlesex Court today, after he pleaded guilty to two statutory offenses. The sentences are to be served concurrently.

WOMAN WITH NO LAWYER FREED

Mrs. Violette Bravard, conducting her own defense, having refused the services of a lawyer, was found not guilty of first degree murder today by a jury in Suffolk Superior Court.

She was charged with slaying Harry Houston in a lodging house on Dartmouth st. on May 1, 1928. The jury was out two hours and a half.

During her closing argument Mrs. Bravard caused a stir by pointing to a spectator and declaring he could save her. Judge Fosdick halted her argument, reopened the trial and called the spectator to the stand. He was Harry Butts, the landlord of the lodging house and he said a man shot Houston.

Mrs. Bravard said her husband shot Houston during an argument. She said Houston got $500 from her, promising "millions" in return, and she and her husband went to his room to try to get the money back.

Motorcycle With Girl Rider Hits 2 Cars

Arthur Witherall was possibly fatally injured and a companion, Louise Brooks, 19, suffered minor injuries today when his motorcycle was in collision with two automobiles at Tremont and Corning sts.

Witherall's motorcycle struck a car coming out of Corning st. and then crashed into another car. At City Hospital Witherall was found to have a possible fracture of the skull.

$10,000 Verdict in Auto Accident

4 SAFE AS ICE HOLDS UP CAR

Thickness of the ice saved two men and two sisters from drowning in North Woburn late last night when their sedan out of control left the road, plunged through a short field and went into Cummings pond.

The [illegible] were William F. Littlefield of Boston ave., Medford, the driver; Lawrence M. Twombly, 22, of Hillside [illegible], Medford Hillside; Thelma Davis, 24, and her sister, Lillian, 21, both of Pearl st., Woburn.

[illegible] North Woburn line and the car, leaving the road, bumped across the field and down on the ice which broke under its weight and dropped it into the water.

The driver opened the front door and pushed out Thelma, who was beside him, and Twombly got her sister out. Then the two men came out of the cold water and aided their companions to firm ice.

THELMA DAVIS LILLIAN DAVIS

TWO SISTERS and two men barely missed tragedy late last night when the automobile in which they were riding plunged through a field and slid on to the ice on Cummings pond, North Woburn. The thickness of the ice enabled the men to climb out and assist the girls to safety. The girls are Misses Thelma and Lillian Davis of Woburn, and the men William F. Littlefield and Lawrence M. Twombly, both of Medford. Top photo shows the car held captive by the ice. (Staff photo.)

SCHOOL REPAIR WORK STARTS

The sum of $200,000 was made available for repairs and alterations in Boston schools during the nine remaining work days in this month at a conference in Mayor Curley's office today.

Present at the conference with the mayor were Chairman Frank A. Goodwin of the finance commission, Mrs. Elizabeth Pidgeon of the school committee, Stephen Sleeper of the department of school buildings, Arthur Reilly of the school committee, Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman, Superintendent of Schools Jeremiah Burke and Superintendent of School Construction Louis K. Rourke.

The conference was on the question of disposition of the $200,000 balance remaining in the schoolhouse repairs and alterations appropriation.

The opinion of all those present was that the entire amount should be expended between now and January for the purpose for which it was apportioned, repairs and alterations in the schoolhouses.

This will put many mechanics, painters, plumbers, carpenters and other artisans to work.

"El" Extension to W. Roxbury Urged

Extension of the Elevated from Forest Hills to West Roxbury over the tracks of the Bellevue branch of the New England railroad, at a cost of $3,000,000, is provided for in a bill filed with the Legislature today by Rep. George A. Gilman of Roxbury.

Garrett Trial Date Set for First Week in January

By BERT FORD

The trial of Oliver B. Garrett, former police liquor raider, on conspiracy and extortion charges, will positively start during the first full week in January, it was stated at Dist. Atty. Foley's office this afternoon. Wednesday, Jan. 7, will probably be the trial date.

Release of Nicholas J. Cockinos, former Watch and Ward agent, from the House of Correction at Deer Island stirred speculation today relative to the stand he and Albert K. Sidlinger will take at the trial of Garrett.

Rumor has it that overtures are under way to recruit both Cockinos and Sidlinger as witnesses for Garrett. Cockinos is hostile but Sidlinger admitted he was "neutral."

OFF FOLEY'S LIST.

Dist. Atty. William J. Foley said today he positively would summon neither as a government witness.

"They are not in our case," said Foley. "Both Cockinos and Sidlinger have records now, and I'm not interested in them."

Sidlinger told a Boston Evening American reporter at Deer Island that he could "tell plenty."

"At last I am in the driver's seat," he declared. "I fear no one and am courting favors from no one. I never spilled my full story and certain persons in Boston wouldn't care to have me make it public. I kept my mouth shut at the State House hearing because I didn't like the looks of things. Now I'm neutral."

FRIENDS AID COCKINOS

Nick Cockinos left the harbor institution yesterday, having completed the two-year sentence imposed on him and Sidlinger in March, 1929, for alleged conspiracy to shake down John F. Sullivan, then proprietor of Hotel Ritz on Columbus ave.

Friends supplied $500 to pay Cockinos' fine imposed in addition to the two-year term, but Sidlinger was unable to meet the fine and at midnight last night, began to serve 90 additional days.

Funeral of Former Legislator Is Held

Funeral services for George Thomas Keyes, former member of the House of Representatives from Pepperell, were held at the family home, 338 Beacon st., at noon today. Rev. Benjamin W. Washburn of Emmanuel Church and Rev. Sherrard Billings of Groton officiated. Twelve members of the House, members of his class of '89 at Harvard, and associates in the paper industry attended.

Fishing Craft in Distress Makes Port

The fishing schooner Elmer E. Gray, for which coast guard vessels were seeking after she flew distress signals and asked for a tow, reached the Fish Pier today under her own power. When spoken off Provincetown yesterday, Capt. Joaquin V. Brown reported he was having engine trouble and asked for a tow into port. Capt. Brown said he made temporary repairs, permitting the schooner to reach port.

MYSTERIOUS SIGNALS FLASH

Big Force of Federal Agents Interferes With Plans of Rum-Runners

Huge shipments of Christmas liquor are held off the north shore of Cape Cod, ready to be run in on shore signals when federal vigilance relaxes, it was learned today on the heels of an inquiry into rum-running at Plymouth, believed to involve municipal officials, police and coast guards.

Mysterious flashings on shore at night, near Humarock and Duxbury, [illegible] strange [illegible] are believed to be signals from confederates on land to run [illegible] off shore.

MANY AGENTS THERE

Representatives of the liquor [illegible] in autos on state roads are said to be waiting for an opportunity to land the liquor, but have been interfered with by the large force of government agents on duty in that section.

From one source it was learned that high-powered cars were observed in a fashionable shore resort drive signalling by white and blue lights similar to lanterns used in highway construction.

A Boston bootleg gang with offices in a building in Hanover st. and connections with summer [illegible] along the South Shore, is said to be interested in a big rum [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

PROBE ON FOR YEAR

The rum running probe around Plymouth has been under way for almost a year, it was learned today.

The secret probe was brought to light when the federal grand jury in Boston concluded hearing evidence yesterday.

Selectmen and police officials of Plymouth and present and former coast guard officers of that vicinity are among the witnesses reported to have appeared before the grand jury within the last two days.

These include Chief Russell P. Dearborn and Capt. Leo Murphy of the Plymouth police department; Selectmen Andrew J. Carr and George J. Anderson, Harold Young, U. S. customs official of Plymouth; Capt. Edward A. Sava of the Duxbury coast guard station; Capt. A. J. Rogers, retired, formerly of the Manomet coast guard station; Thomas P. Finnegan, deputy surveyor of the port of Boston; Paul Murphy, brother of Capt. Murphy; Peter Briggida, Plymouth fisherman, and Owen P. McKenna, customs agent at Boston.

U. S. Atty. Frederick H. Tarr and Asst. Atty. Hubert C. Thompson refused to comment on the proceedings.

"Hands Up, Pants Down!"

Not a Blush as Bandits Make Five Victims Drop Pants

All in all, Joe Gustis had an miserable time of it, what with his [illegible] cut off [illegible] two [illegible].

Joe and his customers had worked themselves into a mental lather discussing the new prohibition [illegible] in New Jersey when two [illegible] entered the shop in West Fourth st., So. Boston, where [illegible] and malt and hops are sold.

"Now you fellows take off your belts and suspenders and let your pants drop," he ordered.

Then the other bandit rapidly went through the five, Gustis losing an $850 diamond ring only after the boss bandit had threatened to cut off the finger; Joseph Alis of 235 East Ninth st., losing $47; George Sabalaiskos of Eighth st., $43, and a third, but unidentified, customer $1.

William P. Corbett Went From Boxing Into Legislature ↕ But Monte Munn Left Legislature For Prize Ring

Manager Who Feared Boxer Would Get Too Good

"Isn't it funny what a difference, just a few hours make, Raymond Hitchcock used to sing in The Yankee Consul. Many a true word is spoken in jest many a true thought is voiced in a song. Hitchcock's song came back to us the other night as we sat in the Parker House banquet hall paying our respects to Representative William Patrick Corbett, member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives. There he sat on the dais, bespectacled, brow creased with the lines of thought, study, responsibility. Beside him were Charles Hurley, state treasurer; Francis Hurley, state auditor; Mayor Whalen of Chelsea, Mayor Murphy of Somerville—a position, the political birdies chirp, Corbett will fill one of these days—Charles Ely, brother of the new Governor, and a host of celebrities. Yet it seems but yesterday we were at the ringside in old Mechanics Building watching Willie Corbett fight Billy Fitzsimmons for the featherweight championship of New England. Wasn't it but a few turns of the hour glass ago some of us saw Willie Corbett knock out Dan McCormick and Freddie Williams? Before he turned "pro" Willie Corbett was New England, American and International 125-pound champion.

Rather a strange occurrence in political annals for a boxer to become a legislator, you say? Not at all. Before Corbett joined the ranks of the State Solons, many other boxers had been similarly honored. John Morrisey, first of the American heavyweight champions, was a member of the National House of Representatives in Washington, representing a New York congressional district. Before he went to Washington Morrisey served in the New York State Legislature in Albany.

Geo. Underwood

Eddie Kelley from East Boston Johnny Lynch of Cambridge and Louis Sullivan all went from the ring into Massachusetts' legislative halls. Sullivan also was a member of the governor's council.

Eddie Santry, one of the best feathers the West produced, served in the Illinois Legislature. Marty McCue, still a political power in New York city, served several terms in the New York State Senate and assembly after leaving the ring. One of his speeches—we believe it was on the widows' compensation act—was a classic. The late Frank A. Munsey, the publisher, thought so much of that famous speech of McCue's that he had extracts from it printed and hung over his desk.

Marty McCue had a great left hand. So did William "Kid" McPartland. At the old National A. C. of Brooklyn McCue and McPartland once met in such an exciting duel of lefts that when a fire broke out in the bleachers those of us at the ringside were not aware of it until the fire engines with a great tooting of sirens and clanging of bells arrived. McPartland was good enough to go 25 rounds with the great Joe Gans.

John Flood never reached the legislative halls, but he became a political power and was one of Dick Croker's Tammany leaders. He is remembered in sport for his battle with John L. Sullivan on the barge off Yonkers. What a licking the Boston Strong Boy gave the New Yorker! Johnny Herget, the original Young Corbett, long was a political boss in San Francisco.

Over in England, John Gully, British heavyweight champion, became a member of the House of Parliament and died one of England's richest men.

MAN BITES DOG

Some famous editor, we believe it was Dana, said if a dog bit a man it wasn't news, but if a man bit the dog it was news.

It was Monte Munn, the former University of Nebraska football player. Monte was a practicing lawyer and a member of the Nebraska Legislature when he heard the call of the ring.

The pay of a Nebraska legislator was small, and Monte found that there were almost as many lawyers as clients in Lincoln, Nebraska. His brother Wayne, "Big Munn," had made considerable money as a wrestler and Monte was offered a chance to join the performing pachyderms. But Monte decided there was more money in professional boxing than in professional wrestling. He came east and put himself under the management of Dan Hickey, Bob Fitzsimmons' old trainer, who then had Paul Berlenbach and quite a stable of fighter.

The Hon. Monte Munn of the Nebraska Legislature did fairly well in the Cauliflower Industry. He never became a leading heavyweight, although he did appear in several main bouts in Madison Square Garden and during his career earned about $50,000.

If Monte Munn had taken up boxing earlier in his career he might have become world's champion. Boxing is a game that has to be mastered young. There are so many instinctive moves it is like baseball, that one has to grow up in it to rightly master it.

MUST LEARN YOUNG

One of the reasons why there have been so few foreign champions is that the foreigners take up the game too late, do not grow up in it like the Irish, English and Americans. If Luis Firpo had learned to box as a youngster the Wild Bull of the Pampas would have been invincible. Another foreigner who would have made good is Henry Persson, the Swede. Persson did not draw on a glove until he was 26. An athlete is "set" by that time. It is too late to master the many instinctive moves of boxing and baseball.

The youths of Europe have taken to boxing during the last decade. Uncle Sam will have to watch out. Boxing in Europe is going through an evolution akin to the one experienced in athletics.

There was a time when the modern Olympic Games virtually were dual meets between the United States and Great Britain. Gradually other nations took up the track and field and today the Olympic Games are a "free for all.

Boxing is heading in the same direction. France already has produced some great ring men. As the sport becomes popularized in Germany, Italy, and the Scandinavian countries great boxers will be developed there. Max Schmeling only is the first of a long line of heavyweight champions that may come from Europe. Uncle Sam's monopoly of seats in the fistic sun is slipping.

"The saddest day Jim Corbett ever had," William A. Brady once told this columnist, "was the day he grew on the first boxing glove. Corbett was a man of exceptional brains, intelligence and ability. If he had not entered the prize ring and become world's heavyweight champion, he would have made good in other and more worthwhile walks of life."

A QUEER MANAGER

"I'm the only manager in captivity," declares Williams, "who ever was afraid my fighter would become too good.

"Willie and I were pals," explains Williams. "When Willie after graduating from M. I. T. was taking a business course at Harvard and suddenly decided to take up law, both of us decided that he would have to chose between Queensberry and Blackstone.

"'If you hang around Boston, Willie,' I told him, 'you will be offered too many fights. You are getting too good and I am afraid you will want to stick to the game instead of making it a means to an end.'

"That was the reason why Willie did not enter Harvard Law but went south and got his degree at Washington and Lee. There he was able to pursue boxing as a means to an end. As boxing instructor and athletic trainer Willie received money that helped him to pay his tuition. If he had remained in Boston he would have stayed in the game. If he had stuck in the game he would have become a great fighter for he was a lad of exceptional speed, skill, hitting ability, courage and ring generalship. You know where many fighters wind up. Willie Corbett got out of the game before it was too late."

That is the trouble with professional boxing. Many stay in it too long. Many leave it too late—too late!

MAX LEAVES DECISION UP TO JACOBS

New York, Dec. 19 (AP)—The New York State Athletic Commission, after receiving a noncommittal cablegram from Max Schmeling today, indicated the German heavyweight won't be deprived of heavyweight championship recognition unless a more definite reply is given to the commission's 15-day ultimatum demanding he accept a match with Jack Sharkey.

"He knows what to do," Max's cable said.

Jacobs has filed no contract with the commission, it was said, and has no standing, officially, with it.

Schmeling's cablegram said:

"Gentlemen—Joe Jacobs is now my sole manager and I have just cabled him to go before your body and handle this matter. He knows what to do. Best regards."

Jacobs Not in Communication With the Gotham Board

Jacobs, Schmeling's manager, did not communicate with the commission, though he made it clear several days ago he favored matching the German against the survivor of their eliminations which would furnish a chance to young Stribling, among others, to gain a championship match.

Jacobs already has been offered $500,000 for a Schmeling-Stribling match in Chicago where 50 per cent of the proceeds would go to the New York Milk Fund charity. Jacobs and Schmeling have an agreement giving the Milk Fund preference in any matchmaking for the German.

Should Schmeling fail to satisfy the New York solons, presumably they would withdraw the recognition they extended to him last June after his victory over Sharkey, and declare the heavyweight lists open again.

Warn Walker, Brown They Must Defend Their Titles

The commission also ordered that Mickey Walker, middleweight titleholder, and Al Brown, recognized as bantamweight champion must contract to defend their titles within 15 days or have their title vacated in New York State.

The following telegram was sent both:

"You have not complied with the rules of this commission requiring that a champion defend his title every six months. Unless you arrange within 15 days from date to enter into a contract to defend your title the same will be vacated."

Walker has been under suspension for two years, but Brown is still in good standing.

The commission took the expected action in suspending Paulino, the Spanish wood-chopper, his manager Lou Brix, and his trainer, Whitey Bimstein, for engaging in the recent match in Spain with Carnera.

Maxie Rosenbloom, king of the light-heavies, applied to the commission for permission to engage in an overweight match, but was told to wait a while. The commission said Jimmy Slattery of Buffalo, from whom Maxie won his title last June, will be given an opportunity to challenge for a title bout before it approves any overweight matches for the champion.

OWENS AND SHORES OF FUTURE DAYS?

Melrose High Will Have Another Strong Sextet

By BILL CONNELL

Rex Kidd, great Melrose football player, is the star defense man of the club. Around Keough, the offensive cog, and Kidd, the best man on defense, Coach Poole hopes to mould another team which will snatch the third successive league title for Melrose.

Frank Stevens, another fine wingman will be ineligible until the first of February. Leo Bourneuf, a defense player, may be shifted to left wing to work with Hannigan and Keough on the Melrose heavy scoring line.

Paul Donovan, sub center in '29 is back this year and is a good replacement for Keough. Ken Norris, sub goalie in '29, probably will be in the nets for Melrose. Last year the third line of the team played fine hockey and developed a smooth passing game.

Frank Marcoux, goal, Bob Hoeckel, Tom Foley and Burn Gustafson are other boys who will show with the Melrose sextet this winter. The regular season is slated to open Dec. 29, with Wakefield as the opponent.

Death Rides Away With Kummer, Famous Jockey

New York, Dec. 18 Clarence Kummer, 31 years old, one of the best known riders on the turf, died at his home, in Jamaica. He had been ill for a week with pneumonia.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow with a requiem mass at St. Mary's Church, Jamaica. Kummer is survived by a widow, Mrs Marian Kummer, and two children, Jacqueline six, and Alfred, eight, as well as a father, brother and sister.

Kummer's most famous victories, of course, were those in 1920 on Man O' War, "Big Red," for Glenn Riddle. He rode this wonder horse in nine of his 11 triumphs.

The victories on Coventry for the late Gifford A. Cochran, in the Preakness; on Ladkin, for August Belmont, and in the famous international match with Epinard would have been jewels enough in any rider's crown. But in Kummer's mind these victories were not to be compared with the races on "Big Red."

Kummer was a great jockey to come from behind and win in the stretch. No other rider since "Snapper" Garrison was as skilled as he in doing this. He piloted Chance Play, for the Whitney stables, and won, at 1 to 5. He rode Prim Harry, at Havre de Grace, and won at $100 to $2.

It wasn't the odds, it was the horse, with Kummer. In his racing career he won more than a million and a half dollars for his stables in purses, stakes and special prizes.

Kummer was given a check for $10,000 by Gifford Cochran for his Preakness victory on Coventry.

HARVARD STAR IS IN BEST OF HEALTH

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

Ben Ticknor, captain of the 1930 Harvard football team, and nationally recognized as the greatest center in the game, has a heart. And the heart is O. K. It's Ben's heart, and he ought to know.

It has been reported that Ticknor was suffering with an ailment of that vital organ. It was rumored even that he had been seriously stricken.

But Ticknor himself, much surprised at the many calls from friends regarding his condition, has asked that it be specifically stated that he is not suffering from any heart trouble at this time.

How the story originated is not known. It is true that Ticknor seemed to have suffered from some trouble in several games this season. But if it was heart trouble, then Harvard's opponents will pray that no member of next year's Crimson eleven will suffer a like trouble.

Ticknor Hailed as One of Best in Game

For the past two years Ticknor has been the outstanding center in football. He has been named all-America center by nearly every sports writer in the country.

If Ben suffers any heart trouble it is quite likely that it will not be the result of football.

Ticknor was today named as all-America center on the team selected by Collier's weekly. This team is supposed to represent the continuation of the all-America elevens originated by Walter Camp.

Ticknor Again Named All-America Center

New York, Dec. 19 (US)—Selections for Collier's all-America football team, which is a perpetuation of the original all-America founded by Walter Camp, were announced as follows:

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

BOTH TEAMS SEEK FIRST VICTORY

Lineup at Arena

B. U.	M. I. T.
Freeland, lw	rw, Orbanowski
[illegible], c	c, Hall
Whitmore, rw	lw, Ford
French, ld	rd, Peterson
Berghultz, rd	ld, Hazeltine
Harrington, g	g, Whiston

Game starts at 8:30.

Boston University plays its [illegible] game in three days when it meets the Massachusetts Institute of Technology six at the [illegible] tonight. [illegible] been beaten by Harvard [illegible] Prager on the former [illegible] game they played this season to Brown in an overtime period.

Coach Bill Stewart of Tech is depending greatly upon Orbanowski and Penn Hall to shoot the puck past Harrington enough times to win tonight's fray. Both boys are in the forward line and are veteran campaigners.

In addition to a strong forward line, Coach Stewart has a pair of nifty defense men in Captain [illegible] and Peterson.

B. U. Hockey Coach Confident of Victory

[illegible] the Terriers [illegible] a great deal of power and lacked the scoring punch. They ought to be a much improved team tonight. [illegible]

[illegible] back.

"There have been stronger All-American teams than this one," comments the selection committee, "but few that had so many who were all-round stars. Ticknor and Dodd have been among the best for three years—team inspirations as well as great football players. The same is true of Hein. Certainly no one team ever had two smarter men in the backfield than Carideo and Dodd, who can be listed among the smartest backs football has yet known."

Ticknor and Carideo are the only [illegible] who also appeared on the All-American last year. [illegible] rating of the [illegible] tied with Fesler for the same honor, receiving a percentage of 92.5.

The other player were rated as follows: Hein, 91.7; Carideo, 91.4; Sington and Dodd, 90.8; all others 90.

JACK SHARKEY ERNIE SCHAAF

Schaaf Has a Three-Pound Advantage on Baer who will be in Schaaf's corner tonight. Also present was William F. Carey, president of Madison Sq. Garden.

Dr. William A. Walker, brother of Mayor Jimmy Walker, examined both fighters and pronounced them in fine physical condition.

Baer's height was revealed to be six feet two [illegible]. Schaaf [illegible] six feet [illegible] three fourths of an inch.

A [illegible] for other [illegible] bring [illegible] in the heavyweight class. Baer particularly, because of his punch, size and general color can win himself a shot at one of the leading contenders by scoring a knockout.

The Californian has impressed the critics during his training workouts at Gus Wilson's camp at Orangeburg. Baer has a splendid physique, a wallop in either mitt, and just enough youthful braggadocio and enthusiasm to catch the eyes of fandom.

He has been swaggering about town in high-powered raiment with a liveried chauffeur and a private car the size of a small locomotive. He believes he will knock Schaaf [illegible] in four or five rounds. The bout is scheduled for 10.

Fights Last Night

Canzoneri-Suarez Fight Is Planned

Buenos Aires, Dec. 19 (AP) Negotiations for a match between Tony Canzoneri, world's lightweight boxing champion, and Justo Suarez, Argentine fighter, in Buenos Aires March 7 have been started, officials of the National Boxing Association announced [illegible].

Canzoneri's manager [illegible] asked a guarantee of $30,000, they said.

Suarez has been campaigning successfully among the lightweights in the United States for several months. He holds a 10-round decision over Herman Perlick of Kalamazoo, Mich., and a six-round knockout of Bruce Flowers, Negro boxer.

Rockne to Remain With Notre Dame

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 19 (AP) In a telephone conversation from the Mayo Brothers Hospital at Rochester, Minn., today, Knute Rockne termed as "ridiculous" reports that he would not coach Notre Dame's football team next season.

"There's nothing to it," he informed his secretary.

BRUINS AGAIN BATTLE N. Y. RANGERS

The New York Rangers, bitter rivals of the Bruins in seasons past, will make their first appearance of the year on Boston Garden ice tomorrow night.

Headed by a brilliant cast which includes the high-powered first line of the Cook brothers and the highly scarred Ching Johnson, defense star, the Rangers [illegible] Boston fans already having put their stamp of approval on the red-headed Beattie are looking for a chance to see Jerma and one of the highlights of the game undoubtedly will be his work and a contrast of his play with that of Beattie.

Rangers for all their early season showing are comfortably placed in the hectic National League race in the American division. They faced the two-game series with the Bruins only two and one-half games out of first place which is not a serious handicap with some 30 odd games [illegible] Ching Johnson [illegible] the New Yorkers have a strong defense [illegible] and Ross Beach, as if to prove his [illegible] protection has been playing a marvelous game in goal.

Deacon White, former Tiger star and a favorite with Canadian American League fans in other years, is playing a forward position for the New Yorkers and another ex-Tiger, Bill Regan, promising young defense man, is a spare defense man.

Bruins Take Lead in Defeating Rangers

New York, Dec. 19. The Boston Bruins defeated the New York Rangers 4 to 2 to [illegible] first place in the American division of the National Hockey League, whom they had been [illegible] draw with the Montreal Canadiens. The defeat coupled with a victory for Detroit dropped the Rangers to fourth place.

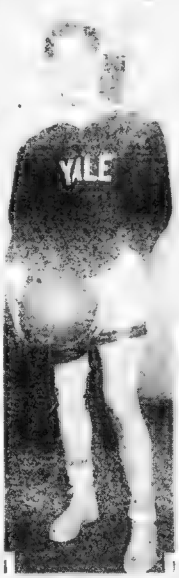
A dazzling burst of scoring in the last half of the second period put the Bruins out ahead. They scored three goals in a little over six minutes of this period and added another counter early in the final frame, before the Rangers could tally.

George Owen, an outstanding star both in offense and defense, made the first goal on Gainor['s] rebound. [illegible] Owen in making the final counts, Eddie Shore and [illegible] the other Boston scores with [illegible] and [illegible] furnishing the assists.

The final period was almost half over before the Rangers scored. Bill Cook made the goal on a pass from Bun Cook. Late in the period Butch Keeling scored again for New York on a pass from Frank Boucher.

Only six penalties were given and although the checking was hard, most of it was well within the rules.

Back Again



UP AND ATOM Albie Booth has shifted scenery and is once again back on the athletic stage, this time as a member of Yale's basketball team. Albie stars on the courts. He holds down a forward position.

Y. M. C. A., A. A. U. Officials in Parley

[illegible] between the Amateur Athletic Union and the Young Men's Christian Association [illegible] president of the A. A. U. has appointed a committee to meet with a Y. M. C. A. group in New York to discuss the proposal.

Membership in the A. A. U. would give the Y. M. C. A. representation at its meetings, as well as on the board of governors.

Tinker After Umpire Job in the Minors

Chicago, Dec. 19 (AP) Joe Tinker of "Tinker to Evers to Chance" baseball fame wants to become an umpire.

Harvard-Bruins Game Is Sought by Mayor Curley

Mayor Curley will ask Pres. Lowell of Harvard, through Asst. Corp. Counsel Joseph P. Lyons, to give his approval to a hockey game at the Boston Garden, Jan. 19, between the Boston Bruins and the Harvard hockey team. It is the mayor's plan to promote the game for the benefit of the unemployed and to have the profits go to the overseers of public welfare.

Charles F. Adams of the Bruins has agreed to co-operate and the management of the Boston Garden has donated the use of the building.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

[illegible]

[illegible] boxing [illegible] queried Mr. Boston.

"The sport is booming in Salem," replied the good natured Silva. "When Zeramby and Hanlon met a few weeks ago I had difficulty getting the crowd [illegible] Hanlon is Irish American and has thousands of rooters. Both boys also come from Lynn which has always been a good fight town.

"I have witnessed much weeping on the part of so-called big league boxing promoters. They say boxing is not drawing, that the old game is on the toboggan.

"I am going to invite some of the weepers to come to Salem on the holiday and see Zeramby and Hanlon in action. They will find that boxing is okay and that the real trouble is with the matches they are offering their customers. Give the fans first class fights and you always have a healthy condition in the box office. I [illegible] furnishing me [illegible] action."

Silva Has Own Ideas About Preliminary Bouts

"Silva," said Mr. Boston, has his own ideas about preliminary matches. He prefers what he thinks will be a good fight to one that will attract more people to his club. He argues that a promoter must furnish the best possible kind of battles to keep out of the red.

"I have known Bill to sign up a preliminary bout just to satisfy in his own mind who was the better boxer. Silva does not possess what a board of directors would call policy but he knows his cauliflower and gives the customers what they want."

J. E. Ahern to Come Here With Boxers

"Tom Kanaly tells me that J. F. Ahern, who has brought many marathon runners here, will be in charge of the Halifax amateur boxers who will compete in the international show at the Arena on December 29. The Halifax warriors will collide with the best of the simon pures from Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New York and Boston.

[illegible]

12 Bouts Carded at St. Joe's Tourney

Followers of amateur boxing will receive another chance to see the simon pures in action in a Golden Gloves show at Mechanics [illegible] [illegible]

Boston Has Been Lucky Spot for Roberti

"Eddie Mack calls my attention to the fact that Roberto Roberti has won six straight bouts in Boston. The [illegible] A. A. [illegible] figures that the giant Italian will meet his most severe test when he clashes with Jose Santa in a 10-round bout on New Year's afternoon at the Arena.

"Roberti has just returned from South America where he met with considerable success.

McCoy Expects to Win Over George

[illegible] of Gus Sonnenberg in a finish bout at the New Boston Arena on Christmas night. McCoy has had the necessary seasoning in hard matches and feels he is ready to step to the head of the wrestling division.

IF You Don't Know—

There are two colleges in the country which have turned out more successful football teams in the past six years than Notre Dame. Tennessee elevens have lost only four games and Utah's grid machines have dropped only five games since 1924. The Irish have dropped eight, the same number as Pittsburgh. . . . Haverford College, the boys and girls play tennis on skates on an [illegible] Twelve of the 22 players on the All-East [illegible] which will face an All-West eleven in a charity contest at San Francisco [illegible] from tomorrow were captains during the past season. . . . Negodile, a 15 to 1 shot, won the same race twice at Empire City recently. The field left the post without getting the official signal and Negodile won. The race was ordered run over and the underdog finished in front again. . . . This is the only instance of a race being run over at a mile and a sixteenth in the history of the turf sport in this country. . . . There will be three instead of two toboggan slides at Franklin Field this winter and the new one will be 100 yards long, one of the three longest in the country. . . . [illegible] Art Shires [illegible] if he proves a success in [illegible] he will quit playing pro baseball. . . . Max Baer, Coast heavy, is a 7 to 5 favorite to whip Ernie Schaaf in New York tonight. . . . Short-ender take notice. . . . Bibber McCoy can play baseball and football as well as he can wrestle.

MAT SHOW AT GARDEN TONIGHT

Feature Bout—One fall to finish—Rudy Dusek, Little Rock, vs. Milo Steinbach, Belgium.

Gino Garibaldi, Italy, vs. George Hills, Wisconsin.

Nick Zelesniak, Russia, vs. Huthanen, Finland.

Preliminary matches all 30-minute limit to decision.

By RINGSIDE

The wrestling lid will pop off at the Boston Garden tonight when Ray Fabiani stages a show which will feature Rudy Dusek of Little Rock, Ark., against Milo Steinbach, Belgian strong man, in the main bout.

Dusek and Steinbach are action wrestlers and they are expected to furnish the fans with plenty of thrills.

Fabiani will feature several former college sports heroes on his card tonight.

In the semi-final, Jim McMillen, former Illinois star, will collide with Hans Bauer of Chicago. McMillen showed here last winter. He recently furnished a big mat upset when he won from Dick Shikat in New York.

There will be a winner and loser in each bout tonight. The Dusek-Steinbach match will be one fall to a finish. Fabiani intends to have all of his matches at the Garden decided by a single fall.

The McMillen-Bauer match will have a 45-minute time limit. In the event that neither wrestler is able to score a fall within this time a decision will be rendered by two judges and a referee. A majority vote will determine the victor.

McMillen Has Come to Front Rapidly

Fabiani says McMillan will make a strong bid for title mat honors. Jim has beaten Shikat, Toots Mondt and Matros Kirilenko. He is of the opinion he will add Bauer to his list of victims tonight.

Casey Berger, former Iowa University guard, will meet Paul Harper, formerly of Southern Methodist University, while Billy Bartush, formerly of Chicago University, will get tangled up with Pat O'Shocker, Salt Lake City Irishman.

Paul Jones of Texas will collide with Tom Marvin, Mohawk Indian. Gini Garibaldi will oppose George Hills of Wisconsin, while Nick Zelesniak will clash with Huthanen, Finnish mat star.

Maroons Outpoint Maple Leafs, 2-1

Toronto, Ont., Dec. 19.—The Montreal Maroons outpointed the Toronto Maple Leafs, 2 to 1, in a National Hockey league game to go into second place in the Canadian division.

Nelson Stewart notched the winning goal in the third period after he and Hooley Smith had combined to work in on Benny Grant, youthful Toronto net-minder. Grant never had a chance to stop Stewart's game-winning poke.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

LEAN RIGHT AS ... ALONG ... SWING

Most of the best golfers have concluded that golf is almost wholly a left-handed proposition, and the farther you go along the route the nearer you get to the same conclusion. When you swing on a verticle axis and have a firm left-hand grip—your left hand being concerned largely with hanging onto the club all the way—and with your right leg stiffened to provide your fulcrum, you quickly note that a pull exists from your left foot up through your left side, and clear out to the end of your left arm, where you are hanging onto the club. Thus, as your forward swing begins, you sense a reverse of this pull, your power, spring-like unwinding itself forward. Now picture yourself mixing up with that a tight right-hand grip all the way back, and at the top, and you begin to see the folly of the equalized grip theory. Your right hand grip is equal to the left at the instant the ball is stroked, but avoid trying to have the hands equally grasping the shaft all the way. Your best rule is never to let your right hand know what your left is doing because knowledge, in that case, means too much power.

MORE CULTURE ON MAT

Fortunes Have Been Thrown Away by Many Big Leaguers

By JOE CASHMAN

What worth thrift?

That's a question which plenty of ball players should be and probably are asking themselves these days.

Joe Cashman

For the number of big leaguers who tossed away tidy fortunes, piled up to insure independence in their old age, in Florida real estate, the stock market or some other get-rich-quick scheme, and who now have to hold their jobs or go to the poorhouse is surprisingly large, believe it or not.

You have often heard that the players of this era will require no charity when their playing days are over as did so many of the old-timers who spent their money as fast as they made it. But plenty of today's heroes will be no better off financially when they are through than was the poorest of the fast spenders of yesteryear.

The reason is that they decided to become smart and when they had become so, instead of stopping there, they went ahead and became too smart and were ruined.

They had often read and heard in their younger days of the sad plight of old time stars who, if they had put a little of their earnings away for a rainy days, could have lived in comfort after retirement, but who passed out of the game penniless and had to depend on alms.

Get-Rich-Quick Schemes Rob Many of Savings

So most of those now in the game entered it determined to save. They demanded and received fancy salaries and built up impressive savings accounts.

In a few years they were in a position to continue playing ball or not as they saw fit.

Up to that point they had done fine, but because they had saved a few dollars, they decided that they were business men as well as athletes and that, caused their downfall.

The banks weren't paying enough interest to satisfy them. There was much more money to be made in speculation, according to gab talkers who hung on their heels, so they speculated and lost.

Many fell for the Florida land racket. Tales of the immense profits to be made in buying and selling land in the Grapefruit State appealed to them and they went for it hook, line and sinker.

Still more played the stock market on margin, including many who had lost the savings of years in the Florida bubble, and when the crash came, they were wiped out.

Others invested in fly-by-night business concerns and suddenly found themselves broke.

Many Veteran Players Seeking Jobs Now

There were more veteran players looking for jobs during the recent winter meetings than for years. Most of the seekers were men who made more than enough in baseball to live almost in luxury for the rest of their days but are broke because they thought they were business men and weren't.

We know of two stars of not so many years ago who at one time were worth $50,000 each who begged for any kind of a major or minor league job.

There will be another large crowd of players looking for any kind of a job at the meeting next year and for some years to come.

It is a very good idea to save money but if you are saving just for the sake of losing it all in some scheme or other, it is far more sensible to spend it as fast as you make it as did the old-timers.

Rename Florida Park for Miller Huggins

New York, Dec. 19 (AP)—The New York Yankees are to have a constant reminder of their late manager, Miller Huggins, during their spring season at St. Petersburg, Fla. Word was received yesterday that the park at which they will train, formerly known as Crescent Park, has been renamed Huggins Field.

In addition to training his team there each spring, Huggins lived at St. Petersburg and owned considerable property there.

CARNERA K. O.'S BRITISH BOXER IN 2D ROUND

London, Dec. 19 (US)—Primo Carnera, monster Italian heavyweight hope, battered Reggie Meen, 200-pound Briton, around the ring in Albert Hall, scoring a technical knockout when the referee halted the bout in the second round.

It was an intervention prompted by a sense of mercy for the Englishman who was hopelessly outclassed from the start. The four-and-a-half minutes that he lasted against Primo were long enough to send him staggering from the ring with a badly beaten body and a sadly lacerated face. The end came shortly after Carnera had dropped Meen for the count of nine.

The Italian entered the ring a top-heavy favorite over his opponent. From the tap of the bell it was obvious that the odds were over generous to the Englishman.

Primo staggered Reggie with thunder bolts to the jaw and ribs in the first round and when the bell rang for the second the Britain was in no way to put up a defense.

He could not lay a glove on the big Italian and Carnera took his time in lining up the punch to the chin that sent Meen to the canvas.

Helen Delaney Wins 300-Yard Swim

She captured the 300-yard junior medley title at an all-womens meet which the Boston park department ran off at the Cabot st. pool. Miss Delaney finished a whole length ahead of the rest of the field.

DANCES OF OLD TO AID FUND

"Waltz-glides" favorite dance with young and old two decades ago, will dominate the program at the Old Timers' Dance at Roseland Ballroom, Norway st. and Massachusetts ave., December 23, in aid of the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American.

A waltz-glide contest will be one of the features, the winners to receive two-hand-painted placques, donated by the E. F. Cloran Co., as first prizes.

Other dances and tunes—dear to the hearts of old timers have been arranged by Dan Moriarty, manager of the ballroom. McMullin's Orchestra, formerly of Crescent Gardens, has donated its services and the proceeds of the affair will be turned over to the Basket Fund for purchase of food for needy families of Greater Boston.

The event will be among the most interesting staged in aid of the fund and a capacity crowd is expected at the attractive ballroom.

The Weather

For Boston and vicinity—Fair tonight, Saturday partly cloudy possibly with some light rain, not much change in temperature, gentle to moderate south or southwestern winds.

For Southern New England—Cloudy tonight and Saturday possibly light rain Saturday, not quite so cold tonight in western Massachusetts; moderate to fresh southwest winds.

For Northern New England—Cloudy followed by snow or rain late tonight; slowly rising temperature Saturday and in interior tonight; moderate southeast shifting to south winds.

For Eastern New York—Cloudy with rain or snow in north and light rain in south portions tonight and possibly Saturday morning; not much change in temperature, moderate to fresh southwest winds.

PORT OF BOSTON IN REVIEW

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Enlargement of the United States Immigration Station in East Boston, which will be completed shortly after the first of the New Year according to an announcement made by Anna C. M. Tillinghast, commissioner for this area, will enable the staff to cope with present problems more efficiently.

Executive offices will be moved from the first floor to the second floor.

The ground floor will be turned into detention rooms for those who have to wait investigation while their status so far as immigration authorities are concerned is checked. Criminals will be segregated from others under the new plan. Special quarters for Orientals, whom this port deals with more than any other eastern port, are being supplied.

"RESCUE" RANDALL

A welcome is awaiting Capt. Albert B. "Rescue" Randall, who has been appointed commander of the S. S. Leviathan, which makes him the commander of the United States Lines fleet when he takes charge of the big flagship on her mid-winter drydocking at the naval drydock, South Boston. Capt. Randall made a host of friends here when he commanded the Republic which came here on regular Boston calls. He was nicknamed because of his assistance in many marine disasters.

WEEKLY SERVICE

The southern schedule, direct from Boston to New Orleans, will resume weekly service early in January, George H. White, agent of the Moore & McCormack Lines, which has been operating it under the Mooremack-Gulf Lines, stated yesterday. Northward bound from New Orleans, the ships will stop to get cargo at Philadelphia.

QUARANTINE STATION

When the Maritime Association of the Chamber of Commerce committee on customs, immigration and quarantine facilities, convenes at a meeting called by Gaillard F. Ravenel, this afternoon, consideration of improvements at the Gallops Island Quarantine Station will be discussed. The association has been discussing improvements in this base with Washington authorities for some time.

TRIANGLE SERVICE

Opening a new triangular service between Boston, St. John and the West Indies, the United Fruit Co. steamer, San Gil, left Long Wharf yesterday with Capt. William J. Mathers in command. From St. John she will go direct to Havana and Kingston. She loads fruit at Tela and returns.

SEVERAL SAIL

MARION DAVIES PRAISED FOR HER WORK IN "THE BACHELOR FATHER"

PREMIERE OF FILM NEAR

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19.—Marion Davies believes in giving credit where credit is due. Laurence E. Johnson wrote the scenario for "The Bachelor Father" and those who have had an advance peep at it, pronounce it the best thing that Marion has done in a long time. What would be more appropriate than for Laurence E. Johnson to do the adaptation of "It's a Wise Child," the next Marion Davies' picture. Moreover, it is his own original play. He certainly ought to understand the psychology of it better than any outsider.

"The Bachelor Father" got off to a flying start from the moment it went into production. As a stage play it was amusing and Marion has a priceless sense of humor. She reacts better to comedy than any comedienne I know. She fairly scintillates in "The Bachelor Father."

Louella O. Parsons

Then there is Robert Leonard who, in my opinion, is a top-notch director, and C. Aubrey Smith, [illegible] role of the [illegible]. No wonder the [illegible] has made such a hit [illegible] preview [illegible]ences.

The starting day for "It's a Wise Child" is a week from next Monday, however just between us I have a sneaking idea that the picture won't be officially started until after the holidays. Tests are now being made for the leading man with that efficient supervisor, Paul Bern, passing judgment.

* * *

GOOD VILLAINS are in demand these days what with having so much villainy in real life. Robert Ellis who did such a nice piece of acting in "Broadway" is now at the Columbia studio, playing a heavy part in "The Last Parade." It's a jail story with executions and what have you. Tom Moore plays the lead and the picture has just gone into projection.

* * *

PRETTY ETHEL SUTHERLAND, the divorced wife of Eddie Sutherland has grown tired of wearing pretty clothes, playing bridge and lunching at the cafes. She yearns to go on the screen and to finish the career that started when she was on the stage. She has just finished a role in "Finn and Haddie," in which she played a fashionable divorcee. She is all ready to do another part, she says, and Paramount, the studio at which her ex-husband directs, will probably give her another opportunity. Speaking of Paramount there was much rejoicing there yesterday when word came that Buddy Rogers would probably be home by Christmas.

ONE GOOD PICTURE is all any actress or actor needs to prove to the waiting world that he or she is desirable screen material. Dorothy Jordan has played opposite Ramon Novarro for a long time and she has been sweet and pretty in her naive way. But to me she seemed rather negative. Then she played the part of the young girl in "Min and Bill," a part that calls for real dramatic acting, and Dorothy was so surprisingly good that everywhere she was spoken of the most capable young actresses. She has been borrowed for the leading feminine role in "Young Sinners" by the Fox Company. Metro-Goldwyn Mayer, in lending her, made sure that the play was one in which she would again shine. I am sure that he will. William Holden has also been signed and Hamilton McFadden is the director.

JEANETTE LOVE given a farewell luncheon at the Embassy. MARIAN NIXON and a group of other pretty girls guests at the same party. MILDRED HARRIS getting herself in readiness to play a part in "Night Nurse." MARIE PREVOST saving her dog, Sinner, and her automobile from the Malibu fire. WALLACE BEERY who was one of the Bank of Hollywood depositors dining at Starks. POLLY MORAN at the same place. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

At the Colonial Next Week

FLOBELLE FAIRBANKS AND LEE BAKER

THIS CLEVER TEAM comes to the Colonial Christmas night in "Strictly Dishonorable," a comedy hit staged by Brock Pemberton.

WON FAME IN MANY ROLES

Ernest Cossart, who plays the labor minister in Bernard Shaw's comedy, "The Apple Cart," coming to the Tremont for two weeks beginning Monday, December 29, was brought to the United States by the late Charles Frohman, with whom he remained for many years. During Granville Barker's season at Wallack's Theater in New York he played Bottom in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" (his American debut), the Centurion in "Androcles and the Lion," and the apothecary in "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife."

Ernest Cossart

Among the many characters in which he has been seen in America are the newspaper reporter in Molnar's "The Guardsman," the manager in "Six Characters in Search of an Author," and Gustave Morand in "The Love Habit," both of the latter being under the direction of Brock Pemberton. He is a member of the Guild's Acting Company and has appeared in many Guild productions, among them, "He Who Gets Slapped," "Arms and the Man," "The Guardsman," "The Doctor's Dilemma," "Saint Joan," "Caprice," "Marco Millions," "Volpone," "R. U. R.," and now "The Apple Cart."

GOSSIP ALONG NEW YORK'S RIALTO

New York, Dec. 19.—More [illegible] tales come to light concerning the Booth Tarkington play "Colonel Satan," now in rehearsal under Stanley Logan's direction. And anything bearing on a Tarkington work is sufficiently interesting to be important.

In "Colonel Satan" the famous Mr. Tarkington has told the story of one exciting night in the life of Aaron Burr. There certainly must have been plenty of them, if the historians haven't deceived us, but this particular night has been selected from the year 1811, while Burr was in exile in France.

McKay Morris will play the Colonel, and others in the cast are Jessie Royce Landis, Ben Smith, Mme Burani, Montagu Shaw, Arthur Treacher, Louis Cassavant, Aristides de Leoni, Elvira Trabert, Arthur W. Row, Harro Ten-Eoe, Renee Carlet, Roman Arnoldoff and Charles Renault—altogether quite a high-faluting collection of names.

George C. Tyler, who is sponsoring the presentation in association with the ubiquitous Erlanger organization, will offer "Colonel Satan" in Columbus, O., on December 26, with New York next in order.

"Life Is Like That," the comedy by Jo Millward, which was to open at the Little Theater next Tuesday evening, has been postponed for a week, it transpired yesterday. Well, show business is like that, too.

MISS HEMING IN CAST

Violet Heming, who co-stars with Walter Woolf in the new comedy, "Ladies All," at the Majestic, next Tuesday night, is of English birth, the daughter of Alfred Heming, a theatrical manager. Her mother was the original Glory Quayle in Hall Caine's play, "The Christian." Miss Heming came to America with her parents when a little girl, and played Wendy in the children's company of "Peter Pan." Since she has appeared in "Trelawney of the Wells," "The Revivals," "The Jest," "Loose Ends," "Spring Cleaning," "Sonya," "Three Faces East," "Within the Law," "Jealousy," "This Thing Called Love," "Soldiers and Women" and, more recently "Let Us Be Gay," on the Pacific Coast.

MARY DUNCAN

Stage Who's Who

George Hassell, who plays "papa" to Queenie Smith in "The Street Singer," musical comedy at the Shubert, stopped a Boer bullet in the South African war, went home "incapacitated" and decided to go on the stage. That bullet couldn't stop [illegible] the footlights [illegible] to the heights of comedy. Born in England he went to Australia at an early age. From there he entered the Boer War, returned and went on a world tour in a theatrical troupe. Since his arrival here he has appeared in "High Cost of Loving," "Ruggles of Red Gap," "Good Morning Judge," the Century Theater revival of "Floradora," "The Passing Shows of 1918, 1922, 1923, 1924," "The Student Prince," "Circus Princess," and the latest "Artists and Models."

EDMUND LOWE IN FEATURE AT MET

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"PART TIME WIFE," feature film at the Metropolitan, proves to be a [illegible] picture. Its [illegible] title for the movie [illegible] and more appropriate [illegible] in the cast.

Edmund Lowe, big as a business man but a small potato on the golf links, quarrels with his wife, the pretty Leila Hyams, over her spending too much time on the green, especially in the company of one Walter McGrail. The couple separate. In and out the married pair's affairs ramble. Just when it looks as if the climax had arrived and true love [illegible] goes the director on a new tan[illegible] hilariously comic and sorrow seems only a matter of make-believe, after all.

Tommy Clifford, brought from Erin after the making of "Song o' My Heart," is nearly brogue and all, and he and his Newfoundland-shepherd dog turn out to be the chief characters of the piece. On stage, is the revue, "Sharps and Flats," in which the featured folk are Fred Lightner and Roscella, Jerry, Hector and the Merriel Abbot Girls. At the organ Mr. Martel plays [illegible] and Mr. G[illegible] leads the orchestra through an "Aida" selection.

"SUNNY" brought Marilyn Miller to the Uptown-Olympia screens yesterday to remain one week. The heroine is an English circus lassie who stows away on a steamship to be near her sweetheart, Lawrence Gray, a youth affianced to one of "his own set." But fate crosses the trail of bliss with a red herring when "Sunny" learns she cannot get into America unless she weds another. She does. Later a divorce is maneuvered, and the finish brings the [illegible].

Drowning as Punishment

The Britons inflicted death by drowning in a quagmire before 450 B. C. It is said to have been meted out to eighty intractable bishops near Nicomedia, A. D. 370. It was adopted as punishment by Louis XI of France.

This Day in Our History

"The Crisis," a pamphlet written by Thomas Paine, which profoundly affected public opinion, in the American Colonies early in the American revolution, was placed on sale in Philadelphia December 19, 1776.

What Does She Gain by Being Good?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BEATRICE FAIRFAX will gladly answer questions regarding heart and home problems. Address her in care of the Boston American. Write on one side of the paper only. If you wish a personal answer enclose self-addressed, stamped envelope. Otherwise, questions of interest will be answered through her daily columns.

Miss Fairfax broadcasts over Station WLEX every evening except Saturday and Sunday at 6.35 p. m.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

What does a girl gain in the long run for living a clean, wholesome life? I've come to the sad conclusion that there is very little to gain. I am 28 years of age, but I am considered much younger. Temptation to follow the crowd was always near, but I fenced with it every time it chanced my way. I've met many boys. I have their greatest respect and esteem; they call me a "good girl," but they never ask me to go anywhere. I'm afraid love has passed me by. I'm disillusioned. One night a medical student was my escort to a dance. While we were driving to the hall we were discussing current topics. He seemed to enjoy my company when suddenly he put his arm about me and tried to kiss me. Because I refused to have him kiss and maul me he sulked the rest of the evening. He has never again asked me to go anywhere with him. The other day he was married to a very pretty girl, but cheap. She went about with a very fast crowd. The girl can very well be proud of her conquest, for her husband is a kind, hardworking, ambitious young doctor, but I doubt that he can. This is just an everyday occurrence. The "good girl" is always left in the background. I am thoroughly disgusted with life.

GOOD GIRL.

Beatrice Fairfax

Dear Good Girl—It's fine and great and all that to have high ideals, but, after all, you live in a world of common, ordinary people, and you've got to learn to adapt yourself, I'm afraid. If you stick to your "ideals" you'll find they are cold comfort in your old age. "Idealists" are uncomfortable people to have around, as a general rule. This doesn't mean that you must throw all the conventions out of the window, but if you want to keep up with the moderns you must do as much like they do as possible. You seem to think the medical student was quite a nice fellow, and I'm really sorry you refused that kiss. I'm afraid you were brought up on the theory that a "gentleman" doesn't kiss a "lady" until after he has popped the breathless question and sealed the bargain with a ring. Am I right? I was, too, of course, and many others, but that's an exploded theory now, and I think you'd better be a little more pleasant to get on with the next time you meet a man you like. Don't be shocked. Think it over.

"Too Good for Him"

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I have been going with a boy friend for about two months. He says he likes me and I like him. But sometimes I wonder if I should continue going with him or let him go and just go about myself. If I give him up, I'm through with them all. I am undecided because he sometimes says that I am too good for him. We have quarrelled twice since our first meeting but I still don't understand what he means. I consider he is just as good as I am, and this kind of talk keeps me wondering. Do you think he says this as an excuse for breaking up, or just an alibi?

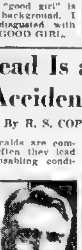
B. E.

Dear B. E.: Aren't you inclined to be too suspicious, that you take a young man's declaration of unworthiness as an excuse to break with you? All men, young and old, have their moments of humility which usually are so few and far between that it's a pity to misunderstand or underrate them. You are not sincere with yourself when you say "If I gave him up, I'm through with them all." That would be what is called "cutting off your nose to spite your face."

Cool Head Is an Asset When Accidents Occur

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

BURNS AND scalds are common accidents. Often they lead to serious and disabling conditions. In children and old people such accidents are extremely dangerous. Great care and nursing may be required to save the lives of such injured persons.



Dr. Copeland

Burns are commonly caused by exposure to fires, hot metals, or electric currents, or by contact with strong acids or alkalies. Neglect in the handling of steam, boiling water, or hot oil, and hot beverages, such as tea or coffee, often leads to scalding. Scalds of a severe type are serious and in every respect approach the dangers of burns.

If you have been careless and your clothing catches on fire, never run for help. Running will stir the flames and cause them to burn more. It is best to lie down on the floor and roll up in an overcoat or blanket. If such a covering is not within reach, simply lie down and roll over slowly. As you roll beat out the flames with your hands.

Never become excited if you can help it. Coolness in this predicament will undoubtedly save you much discomfort, anxiety and great danger.

When the skin is reddened from a burn or scald, there is usually severe burning pain. The skin becomes more red and, eventually, blisters form. If the burn is more severe, there may be actual destruction of the skin and underlying structures.

In the minor burn or scald, where the skin is simply reddened it is not always necessary to call a doctor. In such a case it is best to keep the air away from the reddened area. This is done by applying a thin paste made of water and baking soda, flour or starch. Vaseline, carbolized vaseline, olive oil, castor oil, or fresh lard may be used. A light dressing, held in place by a bandage, will give desirable protection.

If blisters have formed, the same treatment may be used, but then it is always best to consult with a physician. Where there is extensive destruction of the skin, the doctor should be called at once. Serious cases require the most capable and scientific treatment at our disposal.

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," it has been said. Nowhere is this truer than with regard to burns and scalds. Great care should be taken to avoid such damage of the skin.

Answers to Health Queries

M. C. I. F. Q.—What is the cause of a burning and drawing sensation on the top of my head on the right side?

A.—You may be troubled with neuritis caused by some sort of infection in your system. Try to locate the cause and treatment can be advised.

• • •

H. H. Q. Q.—What is the cause of excessive perspiration on the forehead?

A.—Excessive perspiration is due to nerve stimulation. You should have treatment for your nervousness.

• • •

M. G. Will soda or vinegar harm the hair?

A.—I doubt it.

• • •

W. C. Q.—What proportion of peroxide and ammonia should be used to bleach the skin?

A.—This would be very drastic treatment for the delicate texture of the skin. Try using equal parts of lemon juice and peroxide, and if the preparation is drying, it might be wise to use a good cold cream after each application.

Little Things for the Home

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Dec. 19—Did you ever stop to think how often it's something very small and relatively unimportant that makes a room comfortable and livable?

Right now—just before Christmas—is a good time to think of just that, whether there are gifts still to be selected for somebody else, or gifts to be bought for yourself later with Christmas money.

For instance, you can take the biggest, most important looking sofa in the world and if it's uncomfortable or off in a corner by itself—it's not much use to anybody.

But put a comfortable cushion on it, or place a small table with a reading lamp at one end—and it's useful. But—notice this—it's the little thing that's made it so.

Smoking Stands Useful

Smoking stands are one of these little things almost any home can use. They're no longer a present just for Dad. They may be a present and a convenience for the whole family and all its visitors as well. Ash trays, matches, cigarettes and cigars all conveniently at hand right beside the chair or the sofa. And easily moved to any part of the room.

We've pictured one that can go in any kind of room. It's good looking, but inconspicuously so. It won't take the eye away from the more important points of decoration.

Decorative Mirrors

Mirrors. There's another little thing we don't think much about. But what a lot a mirror can do for a room! Almost double the room's size, for one thing—just by the optical illusion its reflections create. Makes it more decorative, especially if it's placed to reflect a bright spot of color. And is convenient—in any room—for a quick peek to see if the nose needs powdering, or the necktie needs straightening.

We've had one interesting mirror shown—a "courting mirror" it's called, for some obscure reason that dates back to Colonial days. It isn't very big, but it is very decorative.

But almost any kind of mirror will do. A wide one, or a round one, looks fine over a mantel. A tall, narrow one goes well between two windows. A pair of them—opposite each other—make interesting reflections of reflections.

Sewing Tables

How about a sewing table? One with drawers for needles and thread and thimbles and snappers. And cubby holes for unfinished mending or darning. Lots of people like the one we've pictured—the Martha Washington—because it looks just as well in a living room or bedroom as it does in a sewing room. The flat top makes it convenient for holding a lamp—and so turns it into an end table for a sofa or arm chair.

There are plenty of little things besides furniture that fashion-knowing homes find either useful or decorative—or both. There's the sort of thing they used to call "bric-a-brac" and kept on the corner whatnot along with the seashells and rock specimens.

Animal Figures

Nowadays this sort of thing is called an "objet d'art." And instead of the little Dresden figure that you used to see, it's more apt to be a china or pottery animal. Dogs are just about the most fashionable of these, all breeds of dogs, and often whole families of them.

Vases and Bowls

Vases and bowls in colored glass or bright potteries are something any home can use, if the color is right. One of the creamy white potteries is a pretty safe choice as it can't clash with any color scheme. The simple shape sketched can go in any room—or anybody's room.

Pillows. Here's a way to get a decorative note into a room as well as a comfortable one. Pillows are one thing a bright contrasting tone can be used in, because they're not so large that they make too much color.

Footstools

Footstools. Copies of antique ones are a fashionable choice upholstered in needlepoint tapestry. And along with the fashionable footstool goes the modern version of the old fashioned hassock. Not covered in carpeting, of course, as so many of the old ones used to be, but in a modernistic leather or simulated leather, to sit on, or rest the feet on.

And pictures. But those are a whole story in themselves, and individual likes and dislikes have to be known. Here's just one idea, though—etchings are very much in fashion. And almost everybody likes them.

Make It an Informal Wedding

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

I am to be married at 9 o'clock in the morning. It is to be a church wedding, followed by a breakfast at home given by my parents. My husband to be and I are leaving on a trip, and the boat leaves at 11 o'clock. I wonder if I would be able to wear some chic traveling costume in order to save the time of changing and still have the attendants and procession (attendants dressed accordingly of course) as I had planned?

VERA

If you plan to wear traveling clothes you should change your wedding from a formal one to an informal one, and then you should change your plans for the processional, correspondingly, so that this will also be informal. You see it does seem rather inconsistent and inappropriate for a bride to be dressed informally with her attendants informally, and have her attendants form a processional. If you plan to have your wedding informal, wearing a traveling ensemble, I strongly recommend that you have only one attendant, a maid of honor and a matron of honor.

Signing the Hotel Register

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

When registering at a hotel should an unmarried woman register as "Miss Mary Brown" or "Mary Brown"?

By all means as Miss Mary Brown. She registers as do all women, the name that is on her visiting-card. Her formal name. It is extremely poor form for her to omit the title from her name in the hotel registry.

Inscribing a Book

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

I want to give a book as a birthday gift to a man and I am at a loss as to what to write in the book. Or should I just enclose a birthday card wishing him many happy returns of the day and sign "Miss Graham"?

One who has learned a lot by reading your articles.

G.

To write a message in a book that we are giving as a gift presupposes a degree of intimate friendliness that often is a bit too taken-for-granted. This is apt to be especially true when a girl gives a man a book. It would seem a bit more delicate, I think, in this case, if you were to send the book "as is" and in it enclose a card, or even better, a note of birthday felicitations. Then you know that the taste will be criticism-proof, if you write in the book you will not be sure. And don't sign "Miss Graham." Sign your informal name, either Dorothy or Dorothy Graham.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

Art of Blending Rouge for 'Natural Color'

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

ALTHOUGH WE recently discussed the proper placement of rouge upon the cheeks I want to tell you more about the latest developments in this fascinating branch of beauty culture.

Josephine Huddleston

A new method of applying rouge is gaining wide popularity because of the exceedingly natural appearance it has upon the cheeks of the younger women. Those of you who have followed my beauty writings for some time undoubtedly will recall my suggestions for smoothing rouge upon the cheeks with a circular movement and I'm now glad to report that approval of some of our most noted cosmeticians has been gained for this method.

The contour of the cheeks of women until they reach the late twenties is rounded, the most outstanding line being a definite arc beginning at the wing of the nostrils and sweeping upward and outward toward the top of the ears. This rounded outline is caused by the firm covering of flesh over the cheek bones as you will discover if you press the tips of your fingers firmly into the flesh and follow the formation of the cheek bones.

As we grow older the tissues and muscles are apt to fall a little and this is what causes sagging and the changed contour of the face.

During the earlier stages when the [illegible] form rouge should be [illegible] on the cheeks in a manner which will follow that natural arc. When the tissues actually begin to fall a different method of application of [illegible] [illegible] to deceive the eye into believing that the contour still retains its youthful line.

Whether you use the dry or paste form, dip the finger next to the little one into the rouge and then smooth that finger lightly over your cheek, placing it opposite the wing of the nostril and sweeping it upward and outward to the end of the eye. Lift the finger from the face and going back to the starting point blend the rouge delicately into the skin. Don't work back over the line, always beginning low and working up into your arc. It's amazing how that backward line, should you do it despite the warning, will destroy the subtle suggestion of roundness that is gained when the rouge has been applied properly.

Paste rouge comes off easily so you will want to just press your finger lightly into it. If the one application doesn't make the cheeks colorful enough it is easy to add a little more. Dry rouge, however, needs to have the finger rotated in it several times to get sufficient for tinting the cheeks.

The Colonel Finds the Lady After Forty Years

By WINIFRED BLACK

THE COLONEL is going to get a divorce. On the grounds of cruelty and incompatability.

I don't see how he can manage it because really Mrs. Colonel isn't such a bad sort after all. But the Colonel is a determined man so probably he'll get what he wants just as he usually does.

Winifred Black

The Colonel has been married to this same wife for nearly forty years. He met her in a little town out West when he was lonesome and homesick and didn't know what to do with himself.

They had a couple of children, a boy and a girl, and they had great fun sending the boy to college and getting the girl ready for boarding school.

And then there were the weddings, both in June, the girl's wedding on the anniversary of the day her mother married the Colonel.

The boy's sweetheart had a mother, as sweethearts do—and she had an anniversary of her own, so the boy's wedding wasn't in June. But there was a wedding with flowers and music and a wedding breakfast.

By and by there were christenings, and then more christenings, and life became a rather busy affair of grandchildren and birthdays and anniversaries and the Colonel retired from the Army and went into business and made a great fortune.

Handsome woman, the Sympathetic Soul. Smart, worldly, witty, but understanding—how she did understand the Colonel. And pity him.

About the fourth or fifth time he was furious. He slammed down his golf sticks and banged out of the house to the Sympathetic Soul.

And the Sympathetic Soul gave him a delicious little dinner, in front of the fireplace, and she had violets on the table and candles in silver candlesticks. And the first thing the colonel knew he told the Sympathetic Soul that he simply couldn't stand Mrs. Colonel a day longer, and the Sympathetic Soul said she had been wondering how long it would take him to wake up.

Now the fat is in the fire—the colonel has left home and filed suit for divorce. And when he gets his divorce and it's all over and done with—his comfortable, orderly life—the Sympathetic Soul will drop the colonel and turn her attention to some young married man, whose wife's mother annoys him.

Rather a pity—the whole foolish business, isn't it?

BROKEN RAINBOWS -:- By May Christy

He said softly: "If you keep on doing that, I'll begin to get jealous of the fishes."

"It fascinates me, those depths. Sort of goofy, isn't it?"

He laughed at her, gently. "Such a child! If only the voyage were longer, I'd teach you . . ."

"What?" She knew that sounded brusque, and wished her introduction were like this—thrilling and throaty.

"You're such a delightful mixture of unsophistication and practicability," he continued.

"I don't understand you. Won't you explain?" (No one had ever psycho-analyzed Gracie before. But it was fascinating.)

Grown Up

With All the Charm

"Well, on the one hand, you're grown up. And on the other you've all the charm and enthusiasm and naivete—without any of the impertinence—of a young flapper."

Her voice was low and sweet this time as she replied: "You really think so?"

Was he trying to get fresh? Did he really care for her? Or was he merely kidding her?

Bobbing about on the high seas . . . despite all her vaunted "freedom" there was nothing like sailing into a rich, calm and protective harbor!

And he was rich. She was satisfied of that. He'd paid $100 in the ship's sweep last night without batting an eyelash.

"I'm enthusiastic about my trip abroad," she said, now, very quietly, "but when it's all over, and maybe Wilda getting married off my hands, then I'll be pretty lonesome, I'm sure."

And so that she wouldn't have to look at his face and see the way he took that bit of news she leaned further over the side of the vessel.

Was it her fancy, or was that phosphorescent patch leaping like an express elevator up and down toward her?

Was the ship acting strangely like the aforementioned cow, or the buccaneer she had been likened unto?

It was.

For Oscar Glyn cleared his throat and said: "There are worse things in life, dear lady, than a little bit of loneliness."

"Yes? Such as ?" She must draw him on, make him open out to her.

"Well, marriage for instance! Someone once aptly described marriage as the hang-over of love! Marriage is boring. Not that it hasn't its points, in a sense, and that I'm not satisfied enough, but I like—shall we say, variety? And as for you, if you're planning to put your head back in the noose, right away, I'll say you're a foolish woman."

"Yes—for the last 20 years," rejoined Mr. Glyn coolly.

• • •

Thereafter Gracie never quite knew how she got to her cabin, for all of a sudden the deck seemed rising and falling, the ship pitching and rolling.

Watch the ocean? Ugh! Wasn't she giddy enough already?

"I'll go down stairs. I feel queer. The motion—"

Mr. Glyn took her firmly by the arm. The widow looked green! Was it from the shock of hearing he was married . . .

As they staggered along the first-class deck and down companionways Gracie was praying that she might not be seized with an active paroxysm in front of this man.

"Don't hurry so, dear lady. The night's yet young. I hate to let you go just when you and I are beginning to know each other."

That fell on stony soil indeed. For his selfish vanity she could have slapped him.

"I tell you I'm sick, and in two minutes more I'll be sick as a dog, if you don't get me quick to my cabin."

He scurried along, trying to keep pace with her. When they passed the end of the corridor where Gracie dwelt he hailed a stewardess. "This lady's ill."

But Gracie had got ahead of him.

The ship pitched and rolled and in between did an alarming jazz movement.

"Now, madam, this isn't really rough. You let me help you to undress," said the stewardess encouragingly.

Gracie Seasick

Wishes She'd Stayed Home

"Ugh! Ah!" The moment Gracie moved she was seized with a fresh paroxysm.

"Come, come!"

But presently the stewardess contrived to get her out of the black chiffon and lace dress, removing the crushed orchids.

"Ugh! I never want to see those flowers again. I wish I'd never come on the ship. Oh! Oh! Oh!" as the cabin tipped far to one side and the drawers flew out of the bureau and bottles skidded across the top of the marble wash-basin, one of them breaking.

"Oh, madam, I'm so sorry. It's your astringent lotion."

"No, No. This is just a choppy little swell, that's all. Would you like me to run up and fetch your daughter?"

So he was married after all! And yet he'd had the nerve to send her orchids!

The Rhyming Optimist

If Love Should Die

By ARLINE MICHAELIS

If love should die, what could I keep
To save crushed heart and reeling brain
When mighty tides of anguish sweep
A word no more the same again?

Through unknown lands though I should rove,
Still day by day and hour by hour
A thousand memories of love
Would quicken into perfect flower.

Dawn, dusk and golden noon would bring
Each one its bygone garlands back
And with each one a cruel sting
For future barren hours' lack.

If love should die, then would I dwell
Within the towers of the past
Where happy memories would dispel
All else save dreams that could not last.

And in that stronghold I would find,
Beyond the reach of sigh or tear
Untouched and beautiful and kind,
Unchanged, the love I hold so dear!

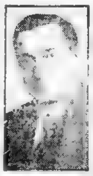
How One Man Has Just Won Very Big Job

Muhlfeld, Made President of Stone & Webster, Gets Teamwork

—By B. C. FORBES—

New York, Dec. 19.—A $[illegible],000 enterprise yesterday announced that it had picked a new president.



B. C. Forbes

How does a man, starting work at $2.50 a week, win his way to such a job, a job entailing the handling of [illegible] of [illegible] of work [illegible] of hundreds of millions of dollars [illegible] a year?

This [illegible] latest story [illegible] is a [illegible] telling [illegible] youthful [illegible] suggestions for [illegible] ambitious to [illegible] executives.

• • •

A [illegible] youth [illegible] things [illegible] munity [illegible] find a job. [illegible] unemployment [illegible] job could be landed. [illegible] large construction job [illegible] to [illegible] level and other [illegible] for a couple of weeks [illegible] he offered him $2.50 a week as an office boy. By bringing in a cot and sleeping in the office building and eating 1 [illegible] meals he contrived to live on his pay.

At every opportunity he donned rubber boots, assisted in driving piles and in the [illegible]. The badly-fitting boots [illegible] caused an abrasion [illegible] ing set in, and he was sent to a hospital among down-and-out ward patients.

• • •

• • •

The job finished [illegible] for [illegible] Seattle [illegible] one [illegible] day he [illegible] young man [illegible] Stanley Dollar [illegible] the famous lumber and steamship king, to introduce the unable young fellow to a contractor. The latter was not interested—until the job-seeker offered to work for nothing. Within a week he was engaged at $125 a month.

Later Stanley Dollar showed him an advertisement for [illegible] tendent for the [illegible] large power [illegible] young [illegible] landed [illegible]

• • •

And when [illegible] was called [illegible] construction [illegible] field. In short [illegible] ner and [illegible].

• • •

Mr. Stone [illegible]:

"George Muhlfeld can establish closer and warmer relationships with people, including workers, than any man I have ever known. He leads and guides teams of workers in a way that creates a happy spirit in them and makes them anxious to work their heads off for him. He can take hold of any job, big or little, and quickly develop a smooth-working, enthusiastic organization. He never plays favorites—he is the friend of all, open, frank, sympathetic.

"He seems to thrive on difficulties. The harder the task the closer Muhlfeld sticks to it until he puts it over."

Russell T. Fisher

Russell T. Fisher, who has just been re-elected as secretary of the National Assn. of Cotton Manufacturers, with headquarters in the Boston Chamber of Commerce Building, has [illegible] a long record of able service. [illegible] Mr. Fisher's direction the Boston office have gathered what is probably the [illegible] library [illegible].

• • •

New York reports that Boston [illegible] of New York [illegible] in State street circles. Prompt denials by Mayor Walker and Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the transit commission, disposed of the rumor. We hear, however, that when the time comes for such [illegible] plans is to have them handled by Morgan interests, in which event certain large Boston banking houses would undoubtedly be participants.

• • •

Wednesday in this column we said:

"United States Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York tells us he has a bill before Congress which carries out in part our suggestion that the Federal government should establish a national employment bureau, co-operating with the various states. The object would be to inform unemployed persons where opportunities of employment exist from time to time. As it is now, there may be vacancies in many lines left unfilled because no one is known to be available for those particular posts.

Take the [illegible] situation, for example. [illegible] Portsmouth, N. H., on the [illegible] in the south or at other shipyard centers. Today it is necessary for the worker to be registered at all of them if he expects a call to work. Under the Federal [illegible] proposed, only one registration would be needed."

California Edison Rates Are Lowered

San Francisco, Dec. 19—Voluntary reductions in electric rates by Southern California Edison Co., Ltd., amounting to $775,000 a year have been approved by California Railroad Commission effective May 1, 1931. This reduction is the third major one since 1927 and eighth in series inaugurated in 1920. Last voluntary rate cut became effective Nov. 1, 1929, when company lowered lighting rates approximately $1,400,000 a year. The rate cut effective May 1 affects 15,484 agricultural and 18,041 industrial consumers.

STOCK PRICES ARE LOWER IN BOSTON

The issues selling in new low territory included Sullivan Machine, Shawmut, Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway adjustment, Hathaway B and International Button Hole.

Stone & Webster and Warren Brothers added a point. Penn R. R. was a point higher. Eastern Steamship, selling ex-dividend, gained nearly 2 points. Atchison soared over 3.

Moderate losses were shown by American Pneumatic first preferred, Employers Group, Gillette and New England Telephone Co.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Wall St. today heard that executives of the principal eastern railroads have reached agreement whereby there will be but four trunk lines in this territory and the proposed fifth system will be abandoned. The four major systems will be headed by the New York Central, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio and Chesapeake & Ohio railroads, it was said.

Newmont Has Part in Copper Merger

Approximately 530,000 shares of Newmont Mining are outstanding, and at recent low of $37⅞ the entire capitalization had a market value of about $20,000,000. At peak of $236 last year, the market value of stock then outstanding was about $120,000,000. The depreciation is due largely to the decline of Kennecott, South African mines, Calumet & Arizona and other mining and oil shares held by Newmont. It holds an interest in close to 40 different corporations. In conjunction with J. P. Morgan & Co., Newmont now is interested in a merger of South African copper mines that involves more than its own stock is selling for in the market.

Market Interest Turned to Rails

While the report of an eastern [illegible] pact naturally met with numerous unofficial denials, it served to turn considerable stock market interest toward the carriers. Many conjectures were to be heard in the "Street" today regarding the probable disposal of the New England lines, if any. Traders are disposed to walk warily because they have been watching merger plans in the making for nearly two decades without seeing anything of much importance happen in that direction.

Auburn "Corner" Excitement Ends

Excitement over the possibility of a technical corner in Auburn appeared to have died out today. The Stock Exchange sent out a no questionnaire to members, which is the customary procedure in such cases.

Real Silk Hosiery Earns $5 a Share

Chicago, Dec. 19—Official estimate that 1930 net of Real Silk Hosiery Mills, Inc., will be equivalent to $5 a share on the common indicates net of more than $1,150,000 after taxes, charges and subsidiary preferred dividends.

Real Silk's second and last quarters are usually the best, due to spring hosiery buying in the second quarter and holiday buying in the final quarter.

Mexican Silver Change Proposed

Mexico City, Dec. 19—Strengthening of the silver currency in terms of gold is attributed to the well founded report that the Mexican government is planning to contract a loan to stabilize the silver currency. It is understood the National City Bank has offered the government a credit variously estimated from $5,000,000 up, to help bolster the exchange, but the government has not yet replied as to terms, etc.

Canada Bank Pays

EASTERN RAIL MERGER PLANS ARE CHANGED

New York, Dec. 19 (INS).—Well [illegible] to [illegible] agreement [illegible] plans by the four leading Eastern trunk railways may soon be accomplished.

Officials of the Pennsylvania, New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio and the Van Sweringen lines are scheduled to meet here next Tuesday and it was intimated an official announcement of a merger [illegible] the world. It is planned to bring about a restriction program similar to that considered by sugar producers.

The principal coffee producing countries in the world are Brazil, Colombia, Venezuela and virtually all of the Central American countries.

RAILS HIGHER IN WALL ST. DEALINGS

A long list of carriers rose 3 to 10 points, and several industrials closed 1 to 3 higher. The volume of trading dwindled, however, to a turnover of only about 2,250,000 shares.

RAILS CLOSE NEAR TOPS

Utilities moved narrowly, failing to participate notably in the advance. Rails generally closed near the day's best, and there was late strength in the motion pictures, but industrials lost part of tht gains in the final transactions.

Norfolk & Western and Jersey Central shot up 10 points, getting back to the 200, or "blue-chip" class. Union Pacific gained 7, and Atchison New York Central, New Haven, Baltimore & Ohio, Aalantic Coast Line and St. Louis Southwestern 3 to 6.

Case closed up about 2, after making an extreme gain of nearly 5. Auburn again moved widely, and closed about 2 lower. Shares closing 2 to 3 higher included paramount, Byers, air reduction, and Electric Auto Lite, U. S. Steel, American Can, and American Tobacco "B" closed up about 1½. American Telephone lost ¾ of a point.

The more confident attitute toward the rail securities appeared to be based upon little if anything tangibly new in the situation, but rather a feeling that peasimism over low rate of rail earnings had been overdone.

In view of the fact that the carriers' physical equipment is in the best shape in its history, and operating economies also are progressing, there is a growing opinion that the eastern carriers are ironing out disagreements over consolidation. Conferences of rail chiefs are expected to be resumed next week.

Latest reports have it that a four-trunk line system will be agreed upon, as against the Interstate Commerce Commission's five-trunk plan.

RAIL SALES SEEN

One widespread report has it that Pennsylvania may sell the Lehigh to the Chesapeake & Ohio, and seek to retain the Wabash; that the Baltimore & Ohio will get the Reading and the New York Central the Lackawanna. Anything like official confirmation is lacking.

A little firmer tone in silver was an encouraging development in commodities. Also, export copper was said to be selling better since the price was brought down to a 10-cent basis. Foreign sales this morning were about 3,500,000 pounds.

Along with the firmer tone in silver, it was unofficially reported that New York bankers were working on a plan to extend a credit to Mexico for stabilization of the peso.

The monthly business review of the Irving Trust Co. agreed with several similar surveys that the turn must be near.

"Liquidation has proceeded very far and business is at a low ebb—probably the lowest ebb, relatively speaking, that we have had in many decades," it said.

"The suction of the outgoing tide has lessened, however, and by all available measurements and by the criterion of a host of statistical data, the turn must be near." It added, "by the stern discipline of necessity, too, leadership has become better informed as to the fundamental principles that underlie successful management."

Credit conditions were easy. Call loans renewed at 2 per cent, but were offered outside at 1½. The further reduction of $91,000,000 in brokers loans was about as expected.

NEW DIVIDENDS ARE DECLARED

St. Lawrence Paper Mills Co., Ltd., declared regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 on the preferred, payable Jan. 15.

Middle West Utilities Co. declared regular quarterly dividends of 2 per cent in common on the common, payable Feb. 16, and $1.50 or 3-80th share of common stock on preferred, payable Feb. 15.

Grains Close Firm in Chicago Market

Chicago, Dec. 19—Grains closed steady to firm today. Wheat was ¼c. up to ⅜c. down. Corn unchanged to ½c. higher and oats ⅛ to ⅜c. up. Rye was ⅞ to 1⅞c. higher. Shorts covered heavily in late trading.

Cotton Lower in New York Market

New York, Dec. 19—Cotton futures today closed 3 to 9 lower. December 9.63; January, 9.80. New contracts: December, 9.59; January, 9.63-65; March, 9.90-91; May, 10.20; July, 10.43-45; October, 10.57-61; spot quiet, middling 9.75.

Dividend Is Lowered

Packard Electric Co. declared a quarterly dividend of 25 cents on common, placing it on a $1 annual basis against $1.60 previously, payable Jan. 15.

BUY BONDS

G. E., Somerville—I own some Arkansas Natural Gas. What do you think of a purchase of Commonwealth & Southern?

Ans.—Though Commonwealth & Southern has paid quarterly dividends of 15 cents a share from March 1, 1930, the stock is speculative. Earnings for year ended September 30, 1930, were 64 cents a share. The company, established in May, 1929, has an interest in several well-established public utilities. Inasmuch as you get no income from the stock you have, you ought to buy bonds now. How much cash have you?

CURB MARKET MOVEMENTS ERRATIC

New York, Dec. 19—The Curb market was unsettled today, moving up and down within an extremely narrow range such as usually follows a period of violent fluctuation.

It was apparent that professional traders were watching for a secondary reaction, and there was minor short selling in anticipation of such a move. However, the trading was equally as dull on the small recessions as on the slight rallies.

Prominent utilities scored fractional advances in the early hours and then found it difficult to hold their improvement. The same was true of the other groups, with the exception of the investment trusts, which were uniformly steady.

A few wide swings in the industrials showed that the market for such issues was still very thin. Deere dropped 3 points or so and Aluminum of America yielded even more, while Armstrong Cork and A. O. Smith pushed up several points each. Meade Johnson, the Ford shares, American Cynamid "B," Newmont Mining and many others were relatively steady.

Vacuum and Standard of Indiana extended recent gains, but Humble, Gulf and Cities Service eased.

Waldorf Earning at a Record Peak

President James J. Curry of Waldorf System, Inc., states that in spite of business depression earnings for this year after all year-end adjustments will be the largest on record and substantially in excess of those of last year. In 1929 the company earned net of $1,205,546 and the balance for the common was $2.50 a share.

Bonds Are Higher in N. Y. Dealings

RADIO Personalities

Another jazz maestro has given way to the masses. GUY LOMBARDO, who has always drawn up his own programs with no regard for what the public wants, will hereafter devote a goodly portion of his programs to request numbers. . . . BARBARA GOULD, CBS beauty expert, says that Helen of Troy wasn't beautiful; it was the effect she had. . . . And her running mate, EILEEN DOUGLAS pops in with the idea that sidewalks should be vari-colored, for slate gray sidewalks, she says, are depressing. All of which has nothing to do with radio. . . . Armstrong Quakers, Family Party and Arco Party have renewed their radio contracts for another year. . . . PROF. EINSTEIN is the first celebrity in history who did not clear his throat before beginning to address the mike. . . . FLOYD GIBBONS recently told the air audience of an incident where the French Gen. Gouraud threw up his hands. The general has but one arm. . . . THEO ALBAN, torrid tenor soloist of the Lucky Strike program, toured the country for three years as soloist with Billy Sunday, the evangelist . . . TONY CABOOCH is throwing a Xmas party for more than 100 orphans. They will attend the CBS studio Monday when he broadcasts; gifts, food, et al, for the kids.

California Legislator to Hit at World Court on WNAC at 9:30

Senator Hiram Johnson of California, classed among the "irreconcilables" in the Senate on the World Court question, will tell "Why the United States Should Not Join the World Court" over WNAC tomorrow evening at 9:30.

The talk is one in the National Radio Forum series which originates in Washington. The California legislator will answer the views of the World Court advocates as presented by Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas in his Forum speech, last week.

By the recent action of President Hoover, who sent to the Senate the Root formula for America's adherence to the court, requesting favorable action, this important World Court question has gained attention. Senator Johnson, as one of the leaders who disfavors American advocation of the bill, is expected to tell definitely why the United States should not pass the bill.

DX FANS HAVE TREAT

Radio listeners who can tune in WJZ, New York, have a rare treat in store for them tonight at 8:30. A radio presentation of a court room scene, "The Third Degree of Dolores DeVine," sponsored by the New York American, will be presented with an all-star Broadway stage cast. This is the second court room radio drama presented by the N. Y. American, the first one, "The Trial of Vivienne Ware," meeting with such approval that a second one has been prepared.

Radio Charmer

MISS LILLIAN ROTH, refreshing young screen star and musical comedy favorite, who is one of the guest artists on tonight's "RKO Theater of the Air" program, over WEEI at 10:30.

Concerning Radio

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

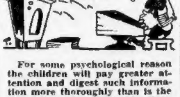
It has been many, many years since a slim young lad, looking not at all like the face and form which are reflected in a mirror today, yet whose owner responds to the same name at least, made of life a wretched existence for the school master whose unfortunate lot it was to have this young whelp under his charge. If ever a satanic-minded, impish-dispositioned, study-disturber deserved to be halved and quartered and boiled in oil, the writer of these lines was that one.

In those ancient days there was no such a thing as specialized teaching, or training; no applying of systems whereby to seek dormant capabilities in what on the surface seemed to be stupid or backward scholars. One rule applied to all: Study the lessons the master laid out for us and be able to recite them properly, conduct ourselves like the hated little Lord Fauntelroy, or into the back room we went for a good caning.

The foregoing acknowledgement of past sins has been prompted by a conversation we had the other day with a very intelligent and modern-method teacher, though head of a classroom for almost 30 years. We were principally interested in finding out if we could, first hand, what influence the radio is having in the class-room of our modern schools. The contrast between present-day methods of teaching the young idea, and our own time is so great it was almost a shock.

Lack of space prevents us from acquainting you with all the interesting information we acquired; but we do wish to say just a word or two concerning health and hygiene as related to the schoolroom and as it bears upon the subject of radio.

All schools, of course, have not as yet installed radio, but a great number have done so and already the health and hygiene talks and propaganda being broadcast to the children are working inestimable good. The subjects of eyes, teeth, mouth, throat and nose alone, discussed by the great specialists in these lines, are making the children "health-conscious."



For some psychological reason the children will pay greater attention and digest such information more thoroughly than is the case where instruction is given in person by teacher or physical culturist. The part which radio is playing, through teaching the school-children, is far greater than the average citizen dreams. We are destined to be the healthiest nation on the globe and radio will be responsible.

Can You Answer This?

An international agreement, as the only effective means of protecting performers' rights in connection with the broadcasting of music, is suggested by the international labor office. Most of the world's broadcasting stations, the labor office says, are accustomed to transmit more or less regularly musical programs from theaters, concert halls, cafes and other places outside their studios.

As a result, this question has arisen: "Is the artist entitled to supplementary payment, or to any guarantee as to the quality of the reproduction?"

Miss Lillian Roth and Joseph Regan, two young Boston people and both very successful in musical and talking pictures, are the guest artists on tonight's "RKO Theater of the Air" program, coming through WEEI at 10:30. Among other entertainers on the same broadcast will be Leavitt and Lockwood in a humorous dialogue.

COMING OUT OF THE ETHER this season with more frequency than almost any other concert composition was the "Bolero" of Ravel. The reason—perhaps because the air audience is becoming willing to digest impressionistic numbers such as the "Bolero." At any rate the piece was radioed so often that we were beginning to fear for the "Blue Danube Waltz" and "Sweet Mystery of Life." And now—have you noticed the rhythm and the swing to the new jazz tune, "The Peanut Vendor?" It is a tango with all the modern fixings, only there is something more to this number which shows promise of out-Valentia-ing "Valentia."

It is written in the same mood as the "Bolero." The rhythm, the beat and the effect is the same: a hypnotic, swaying reaction of the listener to the song. The composer is obviously experimenting. We wish him luck. There should be more impressionistic jazz tunes written, for just the same as painting, sculpture and classical music has its impressionistic school, so should jazz, the true American music. . . . The Blackstone program, featuring Sanderson and Crumit will, beginning Jan. 6, shift from CBS to NBC, supplanting the Eveready program. . . . It isn't Farnsworth, Francis nor Frederick. No, Newcomb Thompson's initial stands for Flash, representing this WLEX newscaster's colorful speed on the mike. . . . Helen Kane "boop-a-doops" it over WBZ at 8 tonight on the Nestle program. . . . The final performance of the Radio Follies will be heard over WNAC at 10 tonight and George Jessel, stage, talkie and vaudeville star, will be mike master.

Steel Products' Prices Unchanged

Dow, Jones & Co.'s average price for eight important iron and steel products remained unchanged from preceding week at $44.42 a gross ton, Pittsburgh, based on Iron Age quotations. The present figure is the low for 1930 and compares with a low of $49.88 for 1929, third week of December. The 1929 average was $50.61 and the 1928 average $49.47.

Vermont Featured on Utility Radio

The Middle West Utilities Company radio program tonight will be dedicated to Vermont.

The program as usual will be broadcast from Station WENR, Chicago (870 kilocycles), at 10 p. m. Eastern Standard Time.

Our Own Problems First

Senate Committee Acts Wisely

Worthy of its reputation as "the great committee of the Senate" is the action of the Committee on Foreign Relations in voting ten to nine against "playing politics with human misery" by injecting European politics in the shape of Mr. Hoover's World Court program into the consideration of problems here at home which demand the concentrated attention of all genuinely American statesmen.

Ten to nine is the vote by which the committee refused to report the League Court treaties to the Senate at the short session, lest their consideration imperil the enactment of legislation urgently needed to relieve unemployment and solve other domestic problems.

That is the vote by which the committee postponed action upon these "complicated and obscure documents" until the first Wednesday after the Senate meets in December, 1931.

That is the vote by which the committee, acting as the agent of the treaty-making branch, has put the treaty-negotiating branch on notice that the immediate and imperative duty of the federal government is the relief of human misery here at home and not, as Mr. Hoover and his fellow-internationalists seem to think, the implication of this country in foreign entanglements.

Now that the Committee on Foreign Relations has courageously, wisely and patriotically sidetracked the League Court treaties for a year, both houses of Congress should concentrate their attention for the remainder of the short session upon national affairs under the leadership of genuine Americans.

Now is the time for Senators and Representatives in Congress, having repudiated the leadership of the internationalists at both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue, to follow the advice of Theodore Roosevelt when he said:

> "We have difficulties enough at home. Let us improve ourselves, lifting what needs to be lifted here, and let others do their own; let us attend to our own, keep our hearthstone swept and in order."

If Congress will devote the whole of the remainder of the short session to attending to the business of the American people, no time will be left for meddling in European affairs.

Canal Work Means Jobs

Hoover Should Approve Cape Cod Project

Senator David I. Walsh, writing to a Boston friend of his own efforts to secure an appropriation of $20,000,000 to widen and deepen the Cape Cod Canal, says:

> "I am most anxious to get favorable action on my Cape Cod Canal bill, but, frankly, I am discouraged. The President seems to be adamant against any increased expenditures and, of course, we cannot extend relief without spending money."

A representative of the President said to an imposing delegation of New England businessmen, representing civic, industrial, commercial and labor interests:

> "If we vote a lot of money for the Cape Cod Canal we will be deluged with demands from all parts of the country for money for projects which will be described as more important than the widening and deepening of the Cape Cod Canal."

The Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., owned mostly by New England capital, which provides employment for an army of workers, transportation for millions and whose ships use the Canal almost every day in the year, says:

> "Deepen and widen the Cape Cod Canal and we will immediately begin the construction of two steamers which will cost $7,500,000. When they are arranged for, we will order another to cost at least $3,500,000 more. But before we do this we must have assurance that something will be done about the Cape Cod Canal as the boats we propose to build would be so large they would barely pass through the Canal."

Now that you have made your own analysis of these three statements, one of discouragement, one of trepidation and the third of good, old-fashioned New England initiative and industry, let us add this observation of our own:

Here is a chance to put $31,000,000 at work WITHOUT DELAY for the stimulation of business, the relief of unemployment, for the expansion of the American merchant marine and Atlantic coastal transportation and for the needed development of an arm of commerce so vital to the United States that it was commandeered for wartime service.

It may be that the White House IS deluged with requests. It always is and always will be. But what the White House requires is a discernment enabling it to select those projects which contain the most immediate advantage. And we venture the thought that there is no other proposal before the White House which contains the offer to spend $11,000,000 for every $20,000,000 which the government would spend at this time.

We suggest to the people of New England they keep after this. Those who readily take "No" for an answer rarely get anywhere.

BUY-LINES BEAT BREADLINES -:-

Lines of buyers finding bargains
As they purchase gifts and presents
For the children and the grownups
As the Christmastide approaches.

These are lines that form a pattern,
Form the symbol of the dollar
Helps the jobless, beats the breadlines.

Listen, World! -:- Soil

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Earth of Garden Fascinating

I'M THINKING so often of my mother these days. Shakily—the way one does after a narrow escape. It didn't seem possible that she could come through pneumonia at 85. But she did. You don't take people for granted any more, after you've gone with them through a time like that. You think about them with fresh curiosity and respect. You see them and life as even you never saw them before.

Elsie Robinson

This morning, working in my garden, I was thinking about her. I'd been pruning roses, digging up irises, clearing up the clutter of withered annuals until big patches of earth lay bared to the sun. To me, the earth itself is always the most fascinating part of a garden. I stood, sifting it slowly through my fingers, thinking about it. How mysterious it was and how old. Before man. Millions of years before man there had been soil. And always the soil had been working. Giving life. Using itself up. Yet always it had renewed itself. The life had never gone out of it. Nothing could kill soil—for keeps. It went through many little deaths. It saw its Spring times fade and its Summer times garnered into harvests. Then, Winter locked, it slept. But always it awoke again and went on. Nothing could kill soil—for keeps.

And it came to me that my mother was like that. Her wrinkled, resting flesh had a mystery in it, too. Like the soil she had given life, over and over. Used herself up. Yet as constantly renewed herself.

I had taken her for granted, as one comes to take human life for granted. I had thought I understood her. But one could never understand people, any more than one could understand soil. One could see the outside. One could observe the flowers—or the weeds—that they bore. But that mysterious essence within, of which flowers and weeds were but a fleeting expression—one could never see that, one could never understand that.

The soil used itself up but the mysterious essence never used itself up. Always renewed itself. The earth that lay resting at my feet would foam with flowers in the Spring.

And if life would renew itself endlessly for the sake of flowers, was it possible that it would die, having bloomed but once in a human soul.

Standing there, in the quiet fall sunlight, with the wise, old earth resting about me, fear left me for a little while and the weary questioning stopped. For an instant I wondered why I had ever worried. I could trust that life in the soil to come back again—no matter what happened. Why couldn't I trust the life in myself?

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

Some Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK, Dec. 19—Thoughts while strolling: The Russian peasant blouses debutantes wear. Violet Heming always looks as though she had just stepped out of the hair dresser's. Those beamish folk with perpetual grins. Joe Urban's evening shirts suggest a concertina designed by the mad king of Bavaria.

Owen Davis, a Portland, Me., boy, who made good in the city. A British chap chirps: "It's decidedly old hat!" The thin bracelets affected by leading men. Someone is always catching me talking baby talk to puppies along the street. But I turn it off into humming.

That blue steel look of Charles Mitchell, the banker. The 42d st. doorman who is the image of Sir Thomas Lipton. Herman Shumlin, the traveling man who surprised the town as a producer. Fun reading the extravagant vaudeville posters in the Palace lobby. Ted Healy. Also from Ohio.

Peter Arno and Gene Tunney bear a resemblance. It's no longer "the 400," but "The Meadowbrook Clique." The prayer-on-the-head-of-a-pin man is back along library wall. Also Telescope Joe, who invites you to peek at Old Sirius, the Dog Star. Freuh, the caricaturist.

* * *

It's been a great year for shoe repairers, anyway. Wonder if they have taken a roll call of magistrates lately? When Fred Allen plays a harmonica he attaches it to a chain. Takes no chances, the big mouth. No Broadway movie house puts out a bally-hoo like Loew's State.

The sad, unwinking look of the apple sellers. Dudley Field Malone has the pink checked chubbiness of a happy baby. And is almost a double for Winston Churchill. Pious who attend Evensong. The sudden bubbling of lights. Cosmo Hamilton wears a derby.

Critics now twitter about "Maurice Guest." This column cheered the tome 15 years ago. Not to read the latest dirty book these days is a social solecism. Book publishers, like theatrical producers, are killing their business with vulgarity .What became of the tin foil collectors?

* * *

About the last of the burlesque booking offices hold forth on 7th ave. Once they offered a picaresque touch of the Rialto. In cubicle rooms, loudly dressed showmen sat at battered desks. Variety and Billboard were conspicuously on file and the walls were scrofulous with advertising sheets—trick bicycle riders, jugglers, high-wire walkers and trained animal acts. The entrepreneur wore a fierce derby at an impudent slant and eternally chewed an equally fierce cigar. The one I dropped in on today ran to type. Coatless, his suspender buckles bore the inscription encrusted in chip jewels: "To Baby!"

* * *

Trick bicycle riding, I hear, is about finished. A few carry on at street fairs and carnival shows but only about a half dozen are doing the small-time vaudeville circuits.

The booking agent used a term I never heard out in the brush. In his fervor over a certain act he observed:

"It's a wow with the scissor-bills."

It was explained a "scissor-bill" was a yap.

Burlesque chorus girls are difficult to find these days for trouping. Once there was usually a waiting list. Now they try for Hollywood movies or New York cabarets and can remain most of the time in either Hollywood or the metropolis.

* * *

While in the booking office an old-timer drifted in. He wore a flowing Elbert Hubbard tie and across his giddy vest he wore a watch chain carved of hickory nut shells. Most of his life was spent as an olio man with a rep show—doing feats of magic, a monolog or soft shoe dancing. He played in almost every small town in America but never New York. Past 60, he came several months ago looking for a Broadway break. Every day he visits the agency. New York!

* * *

"If you had not," writes P. G. C., "been brought up in the pig-rooting thickets you would never associate culture of any sort with New York. Anyone who has seen the world knows it is the most uncouth, vulgar spot on the globe."

O, yeah?—Ce sont des barbares, les New Yorkais! And we hope that spurt of French sends you spinning into what old time burlesque called a pratt fall.

Mrs. Genius

Her Work Is Important, Also

You hear much today about Professor Albert Einstein, world's greatest scientist and the father of relativity, whatever that may be.

FRAU EINSTEIN

To be a genius is difficult and important. To be the wife of a genius is also important, and perhaps MORE difficult.

The wives of most geniuses have found it so.

He is unhappy in America because there is no privacy here, and he fears that he may be "killed with kindness."

Mrs. Einstein, however, will prevent that. For she is not only his wife, but his guide, philosopher and friend, smoothing out the difficulties of daily life, and leaving him free to do his work.

"Mrs. Einstein," wrote George Sylvester Viereck after a visit to the Einstein household in Germany, "adjusts herself to her husband with a tact that is rare in the wives of great men. When he ascends to the attic, she does not cling to his coat tails. When he wishes to be alone she completely eliminates herself from his life. She spares him disharmonious contacts and protects the serenity of his mind with the devotion of a vestal virgin guarding the sacred fire. It is by no means impossible that with a less self-sacrificing mate, Einstein would not have made the discoveries which link his name with the immortals. Thus love, that moves the sun and all the stars, sustains in its lonely path, the genius of Albert Einstein."

You don't have to know all about relativity to understand THAT.

Fighting the Drug Evil

Massachusetts Commission Points the Way

Under the chairmanship of Mr. Abraham C. Webber, the commission appointed to consider and abate the increasing use of habit-forming drugs has made a thoughtful and moderate report of its conclusions.

A casual survey was sufficient to inform the commission that drug addiction has reached that extent of numbers that the State of Massachusetts should create special and adequate hospital facilities to restore the health and revive the morals of the unfortunate men and women.

The commission dispels an illusion which had become current and well-nigh universal. Drug addiction is not confined in wholesale to Boston and the metropolitan area of large population. Reputable physicians advise the commission that drug addicts favor no single county but obtain the drugs which delude and debase them with relative ease in every county of the commonwealth.

Local self-interest, if a general concern in the welfare of humanity were not sufficient, now commends the eradication of this unfortunate evil to all our people, from the Berkshires to the Cape.

Let the people as a whole now unite with Governor Allen's commission in the demand for special hospital equipment where the work of regeneration can begin promptly.

A drug addict is a curse to himself, an economic expense and a potential danger to society and he is the cause of heartaches and sorrowful concern to his relatives and friends. A State which can and could revive him and which could restore his usefulness to society and his real worth to his family and dependents and which does not do it is guilty of social callousness and economic stupidity.

The commission properly says that for the person who engages for profit and enrichment in the illicit traffic of narcotic drugs which degrade his fellow-man there can be little argument for mercy. Stiffen the penalties for this rascal who preys upon the debasement of man and the flow of drugs to tempt new addicts will be quelled while the old ones are being made useful citizens by the State.

The Ideal Husband

Another Recipe

Every week or two some college professor, usually a bachelor, draws up plans and specifications for an ideal husband. Dr. Edward Lyman Cornell, of Northwestern University, is the latest savant to do so. Here is his list of the qualifications that prospective wives should look for in their intended mates:

1. He should allow you to audit his finances.
2. He should be healthy enough to swim twenty-five yards in thirty seconds.
3. He should be willing to rear children.
4. He should be ambitious and industrious.
5. He should be willing to make you an equal partner.
6. He should possess tact and a good disposition.
7. He should be mentally stable.
8. He should not be a braggart.
9. He should be of good character.
10. He should maintain a good appearance.

Words of the Wise Men
